Car Insurance Speech Priority

1,000 New Civil Service Jobs

By PAUL MOSS and BRIAN BUTTERS

Carrying through on one of his main campaign promises, Premier Dave Barrett today established government-run automobile insurance as his government's top legislative priority in the speech from the throne.

The speech, read by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson to a jam-packed legislature, was an exercise in extreme brevity in comparison to speeches under the former Social Credit administration.

But at a press conference earlier in the day Barrett said the insurance plan, along with extensive reforms to the rules of the house, is his government's main concern heading into the second session of B.C.'s 30th Parliament.

Another priority item listed by Barrett is creation of 1,000 new jobs in the civil service, which he said are necessary because of arbitrary cutbacks by the former government.

Barrett said the province can also expect legislation in the following areas:

—A B.C. bill of rights.

—Improvements to pension plans administered by the province.

—Expansion of the 14-man cabinet in amendments to the Constitution Act, including establishment of a department of the environment.

—Amendments to the Park Act, Litter Act, Land Act and University Endowment Lands Act.

—An ambulance services act and amendments to the Medical Act and Mental Health Act.

—Establishment of an industrial development corporation to encourage secondary industry in the province.

Barrett's two-page speech took only minutes for Nicholson to read. But included in the short message was the bad news provincial insurance companis have been waiting since last fall's election to hear.

The government-run car insurance plan will be introduced in the house as one of the first items, Barrett said. He added that the legislation will not be going to a house committee for study before passage. Details of the plan will not be known until the bill is introduced on the floor of the house.

This plan of action, Barrett said, is being extended to all the other legislation referred to in the throne speech. He was willing to release only sketchy details on ghe government's plans, saying he will release fiscal information on the day the budget speech is delivered in the house — expected to be Feb. 9.

Barrett said he was "amused" at the $100,000 advertising campaign instituted by B.C. insurance companies against the government's plan to estabish its own car insurance scheme.

"We are going to have government-owned automobile insurance in this province and if the industry wants to continute to spend money on advertising, I say they are welcome because the money they spend employs printers, advertising people and is a boost to the economy," the premier said.

"If the New Yorkers, the Montrealers and the Torontonians want to spend that money from their high-brow offices back east, ship it out. The ads are good reading."

Barrett said the target date for availability of the government car insurance will be contained in the bill when it is introduced.

In explaining the government's intention to establish 1,000 new jobs in the civil service, Barrett said the government "will bolster services to our people, industry and labor, to catch up with modern society's demands for

ALLENDE TO RATION LIQUOR

Times News Services

VALPARAISO — President Salvador Allende said today his government will ration liquor to combat drunkenness in Chile.

"Housewives will erect a monument in my honor because of the measure" Allende told a rally in this city.

He gave no details of the alcohol rationing program.

Allende has frequently urged Chileans to cut down on their drinking. He has complained that hangover-related absences of workers have crippled production.

Lava Heats Harbor

VESTMANNAEYJAR, Iceland (UPI) — New streams of glowing lava rolled into the harbor today, raising the water temperature to 111 degrees fahrenheit.

"The sea water is so hot, it is hard to keep the engines properly cooled," the engineer of a pilot boat said as the boat made an inspection tour of the Heymaey Harbor area, the third largest in Iceland and a centre for the important fishing industry.

Clouds of steam billowed over the town, making it dangerous to land at the tiny airstrip on the island.

Five houses were on fire or had burned down today, ignited by lava from the Helgafjel volcano that erupted without warning last week.

The 5,000 or so townspeople were evacuated and brought to the mainland.

Police and pilot boats patrolled the harbor today, keeping shiploads of curious tourists from the mainland away from the risk area. Landing by boat and aircraft was restricted, but telephone connections were restored again today after being partly down since last Tuesday.

A long volcanic rift opened across the 2½ mile wide island but was partly filled with lava by this afternoon. One main crater and 14 small craters are still active, spurring out fire, smoke and lava.

Only about 100 policemen, firemen and volunteers remained on the island today to protect property and personal belongings left behind.

FAREWELL KISS from wife Susan draws a smile from Vietnam-bound Capt. C. P. Dillon, 29, Third Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, who left Work Point Barracks today for Montreal. Dillon, who with 16 others locally has been on 24-hour notice for several weeks, was the first man from this area chosen for peace-keeping duties in Vietnam. After briefing in Montreal he and 152 other Canadian servicemen depart for Vietnam either Saturday or Sunday.

Provinces to Get Say On Foreign Cash

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Provincial governments will have a major influence on what new foreign investment will be allowed in the provinces under a bill introduced in the House of Commons Wednesday.

But Ottawa doesn't intend that the provinces shall have a veto power under the legislation.

The Foreign Investment Review Act, which provides for the screening of foreign takeovers of existing businesses, and for the screening of the establishment of new businesses by foreign interests, was introduced by Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie.

The new bill is an extension of legislation which failed to get through Parliament last year. Besides extending coverage to the establishment of new businesses, the new legislation differs from last year's by providing for a Foreign Investment Review Agency, headed by a commissioner, to advise and assist the minister.

But the actual "screening" function is performed by the minister himself, as provided in last year's bill.

The new bill includes for the first time as a matter of principle the requirement that provincial industrial and economic policy shall be considered when reviewing takeovers and applications for establishment of new businesses by foreigners.

Gillespie said in an interview after first reading was given to the bill that it is "conceivable" that what is allowed in one province might not be allowed in another because of the provincial consultation requirement.

But he denied that the condition amounts to a provincial veto on the extent of new foreign investment in the provinces.

Gillespie said the government will start operating with the takeover section of the legislation, and after about a year's experience in this field, proclaim into effect that part of the bill dealing with establishment of new businesses.

He stressed that there is nothing in the bill which provides the government with a retroactive control of foreign investment in Canada, and stated that the government instead is taking "an approach that looks ahead to the future and not backward to the past."

He also recalled that the throne speech, read at the opening of Parliament Jan. 4, forecast other measures to help develop a strong Canadian-controlled business.

Legislation will be introduced later this session dealing with registration of agreements for licensing Canada and to provide that a majority of directors of all federally-incorporated companies must be Canadian.

The minister noted that the legislation avoids a "more interventionist policy" of screening the expansion of existing foreign-controlled firms in the line of business in which they are operating already.

The bill states that the expansion of foreign controlled business already in Canada will not be subject to review unless it proposes to open a business in an unrelated line of activjty. A foreigner not already doing business in Canada who proposes to open a business here would be subject to screening.

There will be no "threshold" relating to the size of new businesses as there is in the case of businesses being taken over by foreign interests.

Gillespie explained that this would allow, for example, Imperial Oil to increase its number of service station out-

Guerrilla Killing

SALISBURY (AP) — A middle-aged white woman was murdered and her husband wounded Wednesday night in an African nationalist attack on their tobacco farm in the remote Centenary area about 90 miles northeast here.

The farm is in an area where terrorist activity has been concentrated for the last few weeks.

Rhodesian security forces clashed with nationalist guerrillas, killing seven of them Wednesday.

Reports reaching here said police and troops were closing in on elements of the guerrilla force which has been operating in the northeastern border country for months.

OIL SPILL FOULS ALERT BAY BEACH

A layer of marine bunker oil half a mile long, 10 feet wide and two inches thick has drifted ashore on a beach near Alert Bay after an Irish merchant ship ran aground on Haddington Reef early today.

The bulk cargo vessel Irish Stardust floated free and is en route to its next port of call, Victoria, where damage will be surveyed.

An aircraft carrying six representatives of the environmental protection service was sent at noon to the accident area after receiving reports from an armed forces Argus patrol plane this morning.

Also en route is a vessel from Clean Seas Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Georgia Strait Towing, dispatched by the ship's agent Anglo Canadian Shipping Ltd., to clean up the oil spill.

Orders to clean up were given by the ministry of transport, said Chris Hatfield, Vancouver, regional co-ordinator of the department of environmental protection.

Hatfield said it was not known how much oil had escaped from the ship's fuel bunkers, but it would be carrying about 450 tons. The accident occurred about 1 a.m.

He said the Argus reported several slicks in the wake of the ship.

Postal Union Again Split

OTTAWA (CP) — Two postal union leaders today rejected a tentative agreement signed between the government and union negotiators Wednesday and called for a renewal of contract talks.

The proposed settlement announced by union leaders and Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet after an 18-hour bargaining session has yet to be ratified by the 28,000 members of the Council of Postal Unions.

But despite the optimistic attitude expressed by Ouellet and union co-chairman James McCall, the two national officers of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers have repudiated the agreement.

Jean-Claude Parrot, national chief steward, and Clement Morel, Quebec director, said at a news conference that members should reject the agreement in a ratification vote but refrain from giving their national leaders a strike mandate.

The dissidents said they felt they spoke for the majority of union members in disagreeing with their national negotiators.

The national officers of the union should replace their bargaining team and try for more talks, they said.

National officers are meeting here today to decide when the vote will take place.

McCall said in an interview that Parrot and Morel spoke only for themselves. They had the right to call a news conference, but the union members will decide whether the agreement is satisfactory when they vote, he said.

"A national strike now would not gain as much as we would lose," he added.

But in Belleville, Ont., thirty-three letter carriers walked off the job Wednesday to protest for the second time in a week a management proposal to speed service.

The post office remained open with 46 clerks, but mail service in Belleville and the surrounding area was stopped when delivery-truck drivers refused to cross the picket lines.

The dispute centres on a post office proposal to use taxi cabs to take members of the Letter Carriers Union to their routes.

Viet Truce Observers Powerless, Says Thieu

Times News Services

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today the international agency being formed to investigate ceasefire violations is a "useless and helpless organization" and that South Vietnam's best guarantee of peace is a strong army.

"The ICC is a useless and helpless organization," he said.

"We have sent piles and piles of complaints after so many years but nothing has been done," Thieu told 830 South Vietnamese information officers.

"After the ceasefire we will have to protect our land, the security, the properties of the population, the institutions

"We must give confidence to the population, give them joy and the confidence that the government still exists and the Viet Cong have lost."

Thieu said the best guarantee that the Communists would not violate the provisions of the agreement to be signed Saturday in Paris is for South Vietnam to maintain its military strength and show political and economic unity.

The second best guarantee, Thieu said, was for the United States to react immediately if the Communists violate the agreement.

"One-man, one-vote" elections could take place in South Vietnam within six months, he added.

"We must be prepared to beat the Communists in six months in a one-man, one-vote election," Thieu said.

Under terms of the Vietnam ceasefire agreement, international superyisors will oversee elections, but it is up to the South Vietnamese and the Viet Cong to decide what offices voters will fill.

Thieu's nephew and closest personal adviser, Hoang Duc Nha, said the South Vietnamese want only the president elected, but that the Viet Cong may want village or legislative elections.

Thieu did not specify what type of election he wanted.

Earlier, Nha called for the withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops from the south, signalling the first official disagreement between north and south over the terms of the Vietnam peace treaty.

Military commanders and civilian province chiefs, Nha said, are being told to abide by the terms of the agreement and not try to capture territory now held by the Communists, but said the South Vietnamese will fight if the Communists try to take more land by force.

WE'RE NEUTRAL SAYS SHARP

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada told the United States today it will send a truce force to Vietnam not as a friend of the U.S., but as a "country interested in peace."

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, following an hour-long meeting with State Secretary William Rogers, said the "U.S. agrees with our position—they don't want us to be in there because we're friends with the U.S."

The minister said he was in Washington primarily for the funeral of former president Johnson but that he took the opportunity to express some of Canada's reservations about her role in the Vietnam truce-supervisory commission.

Meanwhile the federal government has received invitations from each of the four combatants to take part in a ceasefire observer force in Vietnam, the external affairs department announced today.

The invitations from Washington, Hanoi, Saigon and the Viet Cong satisfy one of two conditions External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp placed on Canadian participation in the observer force for an initial 60 days.

The other condition remaining is the signing by all four combatants of the peace agreement.

That is expected to take place Saturday.

The first Canadians will leave for Vietnam this weekend to begin participation in the observer group.

In a Commons statement Wednesday, Sharp said the government will study the terms of the peace package and gain experience during the initial 60 days before deciding whether to contribute Canadian military personnel for a longer term.

Four-Province Lottery Scheme to Be Studied

British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will study the possibility of a joint lottery to finance sports, recreation and cultural activities.

Ministers and officials representing the four western provinces announced the plan Wednesday following a meeting in Victoria.

In a joint statement, the ministers said they had approved establishment of an inter-provincial steering committee consisting of two representatives from each province. B.C.'s representatives will be named by the end of this week.

(B.C. earlier this week approved a $100,000 lottery in connection with the Canada summer Games to be held in New Westminster and Burnaby in August. See also Page 7.)

The western provinces' steering committee is to complete its feasibility study by the end of February, after which the ministers will meet again at the earliest opportunity to consider the report and its recommendations.

Ernie Hall, B.C.'s provincial secretary and travel industry minister, told reporters that the meeting was held at the suggestion of Larry Desjardins, minister of tourism, recreation and cultural affairs in Manitoba.

He congratulated Desjardins on his "sparkplug work" in setting up the talks.

Also attending were Horst A. Schmid, minister of culture, youth and recreation in Alberta, and J. Clarke, director of provincial services in Saskatchewan's department of culture and youth.

Hall said he thought the chances were "good" that the lottery would be set up, but he didn't say when that might be.

Distribution of proceeds from such a lottery would be left to the individual provinces to decide, according to their respective needs and priorities, he said.

"It's quite obvious that increased leisure time demands and the higher expectations of the citizens of the country, let alone this province, mean more input in terms of dollars and this (the lottery proposal) is as good a way as any to deal with that particular problem."

Hall stressed the funding was intended purely for sports, recreational and cultural programs.

"We're not talking about that old bugaboo of hospitals and acute care beds," he said.

FOREIGN INVESTMENT

lets in Canada without being subject to screening, but not to enter the field of electronics without government approval.

Acquisitions by Canadian investers, as provided in last year's bill, would not be subject to review, so that the process would not affect takeovers by Canadian citizens ordinarily resident in Canada, by landed immigrants who have lived in this country six years or less, or by firms which they control.

The legislation provides a "threshold" below which foreign takeovers would not be reviewed. The screening process only would apply to firms which have gross assets of $250,000 or more, or annual gross revenues of $3 million or more.

Once the section of the bill relating to the screening of new businesses is proclaimed, the threshold on foreign takeovers will be removed for all except existing foreign-controlled businesses operating in Canada proposing to acquire a related business.

This, the minister explained, is to avoid "indirect circumvention" of the legislation by foreign interests through the acquisition of a small existing business.

The review process would apply to the acquisition by a foreign investor of a business in Canada which already is foreign controlled.

The bill, as did the previous legislation, stresses that takeovers or establishment of new business by foreigners may be allowed by the government if Ottawa is satisfied that this would result in "significant benefit" to Canada.

The five factors to be considered by the government in deciding whether to approve foreign takeovers or applications by foreigners for establishment of new businesses are:

The effect of the proposed investment on the level and nature of economic activity in Canada including employment;

The degree and significance of participation by Canadians in the business enterprise and in any industry or industries in Canada of which it forms a part;

The effect of the proposed investment on productivity, industrial efficiency, technological development, product innovation and variety in Canada;

The effect of the proposed investment on competition within any industry or industries in this country;

And the compatibility of the proposed investment with national and provincial objectives for industrial and economic policy.

The bill provides for a right of appeal before the courts of any decision by the government, except on the question of "significant benefit" which Gillespie said is a policy decision rather than a matter of legal interpretation.

Such appeals might relate to the minister's judgment as to whether the company is foreign controlled, whether the investor has acquired control, whether it is a Canadian business which has been acquired, and, in the case of a new business, whether it is related to an existing operation.

The procedure covered by the legislation requires the foreign investor to notify the agency of the proposed investment, and to provide information, to be specified later by regulation, to help the government assess the effect of the propcsed investment.

U.S. DEFICIT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States wound up 1972 with its worst trade deficit in history, $6.4 billion, more than triple the 1971 figure, the government said Wednesday.

The largest trade deficit was with Japan — more than $4 billion. The deficit was $2 billion with Canada.

The net outflow of dollars from merchandise trade with other countries is a major obstacle in bringing the nation's balance-of-payments deficit back into line, the commerce department report showed.

Speech

quality services provided by skilled people."

He said the civil service has been "handicapped" because the Social Credit government kept it under-staffed in what Barrett termed "a false economy." The new jobs, some of which he said would likely have come about in any event, will be spread out through all levels of government, touching all departments.

The premier said the hiring of the 1,000 new people is not all the government is planning to do to reduce unemployment in the province. He said further details of work programs will be unveiled in the budget speech. The new jobs constitute "a key move by the government to tackle the unemployment problem and meet our own needs at the same time," he said.

NO NEED

On plans for an industrial development corporation, Barrett said a bill will definitely be introduced at this session. He said there is no need for the government to establish incentives to primary resource development, but secondary development is another matter.

He called the state of the economy "very good", once again promising details in the budget speech.

One of the two legislative committees named by Dowding has already advocated an oral question period, and the use of standing House committees when the legislature is not in session.

BIGGER ROLE

The throne speech gave a fairly firm indication that the committees will play a much more important role in future, in announcing the intention to "increase the work and designed use" of the standing committees.

The throne speech also made mention of "major administrative and legislative changes" in the department of industrial development, trade and commerce. Barrett did not elaborate on this at the press conference.

Also touched on was the subject of consumption and advertising of tobacco and alcoholic products. This, along with the planned reforms of the house, was referred to as a "major problem" which will come up as a result of the short session held in October. The speech mentions a "continuing study" of the effects of consumption and advertising of tobacco and liquor.

MUST WAIT

At the press conference, Barrett wouldn't be drawn on the speech's promise of legislation dealing with ambulance services. Asked if this meant the provincial government is entering the field of ambulance services which it has been urged to do from many quarters — he said clarification would have to await introduction of the bill.

Barrett gave a clear indication of his own personal hopes that the session will produce significant changes in the rules and procedures of the B.C. House.

ANXIOUS

The subject was only briefly and indirectly mentioned in the throne speech, but Barrett told the pre-session press conference he is "very anxious" to see parliamentary reform pushed through with the agreement of all members of the house.

And he said he wants such reforms instituted as quickly as possible "before the dangers of lapsing into the rationalisation of office limit my concern."

Facing a phalanx of some 40 reporters at the press conference, Barrett, in his striped mid-brown suit, was relaxed, super-confident and obviously enjoying himself.

He was prepared to talk in general terms on some aspects of the throne speech and his government's legislative intentions, but for the most part was non-committal and a slick fielder of specific questions.

SHOPPING LIST

He stressed that the legislative measures listed in the speech amounted to only "a partial shopping list" of the legislation which the province could expect from this session. Later, in answer to a question, he said he expects somewhere in the region of 80 pieces of legislation.

The premier said it is looking more and more likely that there will be a second session of the legislature, probably in the fall, and that standing committees of the house will give detailed, on-going study to certain legislation which could be introduced at this session and deferred to the fall.

But, asked if the government-run automobile insurance would fall in that category, he replied simply "No."

To another question, whether there is likely to be any increase in corporation taxes from the present level of 10 per cent, Barrett indicated there could be something on that subject in the budget speech he will present Feb. 9.

. . . PEACE FORCE

The 60-day period coincides with the period provided in the peace package for withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam and release of prisoners of war.

The protocol dealing with supervision of the ceasefire calls for 290 men from each of the four prospective countries on the observer group — Canada, Hungary, Poland and Indonesia.

He also told former prime minister John Diefenbaker the government was concerned that Canada as one of four observer countries would be required to pay two per cent of the cost of keeping its men in Vietnam over and above regular pay.

Canada had proposed that the four combatant groups — the U.S., North and South Vietnam and the Viet Cong — pay all costs beyond normal pay for the troops.

This would include such things as housing, food, travel and other similar operational expenses.

He said he would like to see the United Nations security council involved as the continuing political authority for the observer team.

Meanwhile, some opposition dissatisfaction was sounded Wednesday about sending troops to Vietnam before a Commons debate on the peace supervisory role there.

But there is no indication that any party intends to vote against dispatching troops.

Sharp said Wednesday that a debate probably will be held next week on a government resolution to dispatch troops.

The first planeload will leave St. Hubert, Que., near Montreal Sunday. About 120 of a total force of 288 men are scheduled to depart then.

NDP leader David Lewis said, also outside the Commons, that he does not think the government is being hasty in committing men to Southeast Asia.

. . . VIETNAM

"We are not going to expand and make forays into areas that are under control of the other side," he said. "If the other side tries to expand its area, of coursse we are going to stop them by force. "We have no illusions that the Communists are going to abide strictly by their promises," he said. "We still have to watch."

Meanwhile, U.S. planes striking throughout South Vietnam and the heaviest Communist shelling in nearly a month spelled no let-up on either side today.

Neither U.S. nor South Vietnamese officials made any secret of their intent to keep fighting until the ceasefire takes effect.

"Until then we'll do anything we want to," said a South Vietnamese official.

"There has been no change in mission," said a ranking U.S. officer.

A Communist coast artillery shell hit the U.S. guided missile frigate Preble off northernmost South Vietnam Wednesday causing damage but no injuries, the U.S. command said today.

The command said shrapnel from four additional shells also sprayed the Preble. Three electronic antennas and one torpedo tube were damaged.

The Preble was on a naval gunship mission in support of South Vietnamese troops ashore, a spokesman said. It remained on duty.

The United States, however, has stopped troop shipments to Vietnam, ordered the clearing of North Vietnam's mined harbors (See also Page 28) and prepare to aid American prisoners of war.

The Pentagon has cancelled all military orders for assignments to Vietnam "effective immediately."

However there has been no restriction placed on the estimated 84,000 U.S. servicemen stationed at bases in Thailand and on offshore vessels of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

The White House indicated they would be withdrawn as the need for them diminishes, but dismissed the possibility of a re-introduction of U.S. troops in South Vietnam as a "hypothetical situation we don't expect to arise."

OSTLER GIVES SOFT DRUGS HARD LINE

Victoria provincial court Judge William Ostler today warned he will take a tougher stand in future on first-time soft drug offenders.

The judge said, in the case of a 17-year-old James Walter Miller of Duncan charged with the possession of marijuana, that "automatic suspended sentences" seem to have done little to deter offenders.

If anything, he said to Crown prosecutor Bob Johnson, "there has been an increase."

Johnson had intimated to Ostler in July, 1972, that the department of justice was prepared to take "a more lenient attitude" towards first offenders' soft drug use."

Outside court, Johnson denied that suspended sentences were automatic as Ostler had said.

The prosecutor agreed however, that for the past six months a first offense had usually brought a suspended sentence and six months probation for possession of marijuana or hashish.

He said he was not sure what course of action Ostler was now contemplating.

Miller, a student, was given a suspended sentence and six months probation today for possession of marijuana.

Native Education 'Inadequate'

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

White man's efforts to provide an education for Canada's native population have too often been meaningless, prejudicial and destructive, according to Bernard Gillie, who spent 10 years supervising education in Canada's north.

A native Victorian, who spent 31 years as a teacher and principal in Victoria schools, Gillie is now retired here and keen to tell southern Canadians about Eskimo education in the north.

He'll talk about his experiences at a public address and slide show in Newcombe Auditorium next Sunday evening at 8.

Four years ago Gillie was given one of the toughest jobs in Canada when he set out to build the first department of education for all the Northwest Territories.

With 69 schools stretched over more than a million square miles, Gillie was faced with co-ordinating 650 teachers and 13,000 students, most of native blood, into a meaningful education system.

"My goal in education was to restore the confidence and pride of these people who've had such a sorry deal for 150 years," Gillie said.

"Most Canadians don't know about the terrible problems confronting native people — I didn't until I went up north.

"They're underprivileged, disillusioned and disoriented. The U.S. is now paying the dreadful price for treating their Negro population the same way."

Gillie said his objective in setting up the educational program was to restore the Eskimo and Indian cultures and at the same time expose children to white society.

"Native children must learn to understand English society and language if they hope to survive today," Gillie says.

School attendance is compulsory until age 15 and many native children drop out of school after that, Gillie says, but by that time "they can better judge whether they want to live like a white man in a 9-to-5 job or hunt and fish like their fathers did."

Helping the Eskimo preserve his way of life and at the same time trying to help him cope with two diverse cultures is a difficult task and Gillie worked on several methods of dealing with the problem.

Language was a priority item since many children were losing their own language and developing no real skill in English.

Gillie established a system where each class has a native teaching assistant and only Eskimo is spoken in the first two or three grades with English being taught slowly as a second language.

Then English takes over as the main language with Eskimo still being taught as a subject.

Besides having native teaching assistants in the classroom, the deparrtment of education has started a native teacher-training program in conjunction with the University of Alberta.

Gillie says other teachers for the north are chosen from across Canada and applications flood in every year. The average stay of teachers, who get special isolation pay, is about four years.

Resource materials were another problem, with teachers previously trying to adapt the regular curriculum to the native environment.

Now, Gillie says, new books and materials written by Eskimo people are being introduced into the classroom.

Local "education advisory committees" have been set up for every school so that native parents can decide what kind of programs they want to see in the school.

The committee is elected and meets regularly with the principal and teachers.

"It's given the community a tremendous sense of pride in their schools," Gillie said.

"Also people from the community come into the schools and talk to the kids about the past and their culture."

Schools in the Northwest Territories are financed largely through federal funds.

Costs are high, Gillie says, with last year's budget totalling nearly $31 million. Some children, especially those in high school, must live in student residences but no child is forced to live away from home.

Free public education didn't begin in the north until 1955. Before that only about 14 per cent of children went to church-run schools.

Now attendance is comparable to the national average and all N.W.T. students are allowed four years of free university education anywhere in Canada.

Gillie says all Grade 12 students in the north write the fairly rigorous Alberta government exams and have no trouble getting accepted into university.

A past principal of Willows elementary and S. J. Willis senior secondary, Gillie has been honored with a life membership in the B.C. Teachers' Federation and called one of the most distinguished educators in B.C.

He says he doesn't want to leave the education field despite his retirement, and is lecturing part-time at the University of Victoria.

He is in charge of all N.W.T. students attending schools in B.C. and is helping to develop a native teacher aide program in the province.

UVic Report Aims at Unity

Changes aimed at ending distrust and division within the University of Victoria and at slowing the "extraordinarily high" turnover in academic administrators were recommended in a report released Wednesday.

The report of the commission of academic governance, the second of two reports commissioned by president Hugh Farquhar last January, was prepared by dean of graduate studies Dr. Stephen Jennings and five university members.

It recommends division of the faculty of arts and science into two faculties, creation of the positions of deputy president and dean of inter-faculty affairs, and regular meetings between the university's two governing bodies, the senate and the board of governors.

The sentiment that academic administrators are "second-class citizens" must end, said the commission.

"The dichotomy between 'we, the faculty' and 'they, the administrators' must end if this university is to be well and harmoniously governed."

High Turnover

The commission pointed out that in the last five years the university has had four presidents or acting presidents, five deans or acting deans of arts and science, two deans of fine arts, four deans or acting deans of education, three deans or acting deans of graduate studies and three deans of administration.

"During the same five year period, it has become apparent that there are very substantial differences in opinion among and between teaching staff and students as to the purpose of a university education and the goals of the University of Victoria . . .," it said.

"It is clear that many faculty members have ceased to participate in faculty and faculty association meetings," the commission continued.

"Coupled with this is a distrust of academic administrators and, in our opinion, a potentially disruptive predisposition to use public media for exhaustive discussions of many internal university problems."

The result of these problems has been "a major breakdown in the consultative process at the faculty and university-wide levels, and a partial breakdown of this process within some departments."

Extended Terms

To slow the turnover in administrators, the commission recommended that department chairman be appointed for a five-year term rather than three. Faculty deans should also hold office for five-year terms, and the university president for seven years.

Advisory committees should be appointed to advise the president on selection of deans and chairmen, and to advise the board of governors on selection of a new president, it said.

The commission found there were "some genuine grounds for unhappiness and dissatisfaction with senate's performance."

To improve the efficiency of this body, which governs academic matters at the university, the commission recommended senate form a committee to prepare an agenda for each meeting.

As chairman of senate, the president should serve "not merely as a passive arbiter of senate debates but should be an active participant in them."

Requests that non-academic and unionized staff send representatives to senate were rejected.

The commission also rejected suggestions that faculty members sit as observers at board of governors meetings, and that board of governors meetings be open to the public.

"The commission is emphatic that in the case of the president of the university the number of people reporting directly to him should be kept as small as possible."

A dean of inter-faculty affairs would assume responsibility for five of the 12 officers currently reporting to the president, it said, and he would also be responsible for academic planning.

A deputy president would serve as the president's right hand man, doing whatever duties the president assigned to him.

In making its recommendations, the commission admitted that organizational matters are not the main problem at the university.

"We are under no illusion as to the real cause of the difficulties that we have experienced in recent years," it said.

"Our fundamental problems have not been organizational but have been behavioural and in part, ideological. No system of government will work successfully without the co-operation and acceptance of those so governed."

Other recommendations in the 90-page report were:

—A reconstituted department of modern languages which includes the departments of French language and literature, department of Hispanic and Italian studies, and department of Slavonic and Oriental studies.

Recommendation

This recommendation was also made by the report of the commission on academic development, released in December.

—That periodic statements of the academic goals of the university, and of each faculty and department be formulated.

Indians Protest Vote Probe

KAMLOOPS (CP) — About 40 members of the Kamloops Indian Band occupied the department of Indian Affairs office here Wednesday, saying they were challenging the validity of a protest against the Dec. 21 band election.

They also wanted to publicize grievances against the previous band administration, they said, and told reporters they intended to stay in the offices until this afternoon.

Members occupied hallways, staged a march around the building, and entered the main office working area. They did not interfere with department employees, who continued working.

Alan Cornwall, acting supervisor of the office, said no one would be evicted. "We are always glad to see Indian people in the office," he said.

Staff Sgt. Bob Fullerton, in charge of the Kamloops RCMP, appeared briefly at the beginning of the protest, spoke privately with Norman LaRue, chief-elect of the band, then left.

Prime target of the protest is a federal order-in-council, passed Tuesday, calling for an inquiry into possible voting irregularities in the Dec. 21 election.

Former band chief Gus Gottfriedson and former council member Clarence Jules protested the election, claiming that persons from outside the reserve voted.

An Ottawa spokesman for the Indian affairs department said results from the inquiry are expected to be announced in February.

The spokesman said the inquiry will begin 14 days after all concerned have been officially notified.

A Job to Be Done

It should be obvious that there will be formidable problems connected with the establishment of peace in Vietnam. One of them will be to ensure that the terms of the truce regarding movement of men and materials will be observed — and this refers particularly to the possibility of attempts to reinforce the 145,000 North Vietnam troops estimated to be in the south. Because it will be an essential part of the agreement — a breakdown could precipitate full-scale fighting and destroy the delicate fabric of peace which has been so laboriously created at Paris — the task of supervising the cease-fire is a most important one.

There have been few voices raised in Canada against Canadian participation in the International Commission of Control and Supervision; it is surprising that there have been any. As a partner in the old International Control Commission whose work was frustrated and negated by impossible working conditions, it was natural that the Canadian government should have accepted the latest invitation with caution and with the imposition of certain conditions which must be met.

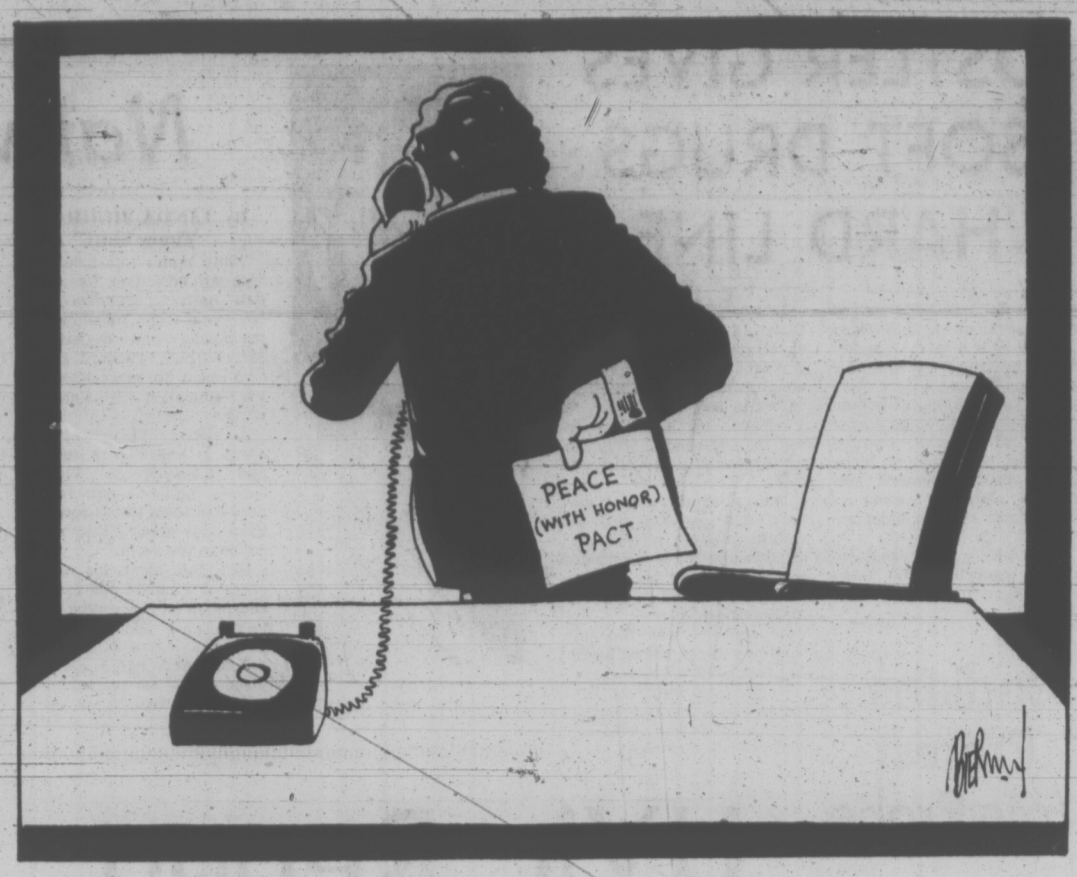
But there could be no denial of Canadian support for the proposed organization. If this country is to pursue its image as a peace-loving nation ready to help the cause of peace wherever the need arises, then it cannot turn its back on requests for assistance — particularly in so important a job as that of making the Vietnam truce a permanent reality. The invitation is itself a recognition of Canada's abilities in this field.

The quick but careful reaction of External Affairs Minister Sharp was therefore commendable. At short notice the contingent of 288 men will be assembled and dispatched to Vietnam to take over — along with similar contingents from Hungary, Indonesia and Poland — the patrol of key traffic areas and entry points in order to observe and report any infractions of the truce terms. The commission troops will not be called upon to use force — they will merely report.

Mr. Sharp has put an initial 60-day limit on Canada's service, to await the formation of an international body of a permanent nature to which reports may be made. The collapse of the former ICC was largely due to the fact that there was no neutral body to receive reports and act upon them.

There should be no misunderstanding about the difficulties of the Vietnam situation. There are many reasons why fighting could break out at one point or another, and hence some danger is attached to the Canadian service abroad. But the challenge was one which Canada could not refuse.

"It is no secret to anyone that we have serious doubts about what we are being asked to undertake," Mr. Sharp said. But he noted with pleasure that in the House, "all parties seemed to agree that if we could be useful, we should participate."



". . . confidentially, Henry . . . what went wrong . . ."

After 'Papa Doc'

When 'Papa Doc' Duvalier died, having made arrangements for his 19-year-old playboy son to succeed him as president of Haiti for life, chaos was predicted for that island dictatorship with its long history of bloody violence.

About two years later, observers note a surprising development. With the young man in charge "a breath of fresh air" is reported blowing through the country with a perceptible improvement in its economic conditions.

There was ample room for the improvement in a nation which, seven years ago, reported a per capita annual income of $70 in a population 90 per cent illiterate.

The young man at the helm — or whoever is guiding him — has effected significant changes. His cabinet has been purged of some members suspected of enriching themselves from their political position and a campaign against corruption is reportedly continuing. As a consequence foreign investment is increasing and exports have been growing.

To what degree education has been advanced and the superstitions of voodooism reduced is not yet clearly apparent, but if Haiti had nowhere to go but up under "Papa Doc," it seems now to be on the rise — sufficiently so that members of the Organization of American States are interested in restoring its respectability. With assistance from the United States expanding, the picture of Haiti today seems to be much brighter than two years ago. It is early yet to forecast continuing advances there, but the prospects at least are more encouraging.

Concentrating on Safety

Saanich municipality and Canada Manpower are to be commended for jointly sponsoring a special life-saving training course for people who hope to act as lifeguards. Candidates will be carefully screened: they must hold an acceptable life-saving proficiency certificate and must be at least 17 years old.

The course itself is demanding. Records show that a limited number of candidates pass. This implies high standards for successful entrants.

Provision of a qualified corps will not, however, eliminate dangers of drowning. The individual who swims alone, or in the dark of night, may invite trouble. So also will the inexperienced youngster — or elder — who ignores ordinary precautions.

But the training courses should reduce the hazards in waters supervised by graduates who know how to react instantly to trouble, concentrate on their work and have the technical as well as the physical ability to give assistance.

Supplementing the course should be an emphasis on the "buddy" system employed by informed water-safety groups. This involves the pairing of swimmers, each of whom keeps his eye on his mate and, without endangering himself, summons competent help for his "buddy" when it is needed.

Growing Problem of Day Care

OTTAWA — The provinces, on the evidence of recent conferences, are becoming increasingly critical of federally-sponsored social programs.

Shared cost schemes, although often welcomed in the beginning, usually become bones of angry contention as programs expand and grow. With the passage of time, the number of such bones does not decrease; it tends rather to grow.

It seems quite possible that this will happen in the case of day care services to which Ottawa contributes under the Canada Assistance Plan. The results of a survey in this field have now been published by National Health and Welfare. With the survey comes a release noting that federal support will increase to an estimated $8 million in 1973.

By Ottawa's measuring stick, this is a small item. But two points are to be noted. The first is that expenditures will have doubled since 1971. The second is that there is vast scope for expansion, as shown by the finding that only 1.25 per cent of the children of working mothers were enrolled in day care centres in 1971.

Changed View

It appears from the survey that the federal government was slow to enter this field because of a controversy among professionals about the value of group programs. There was formerly a strong opinion that children should be at home with their mothers; that separation ought to be discouraged since it was held to be the cause of many later troubles. This view has been undermined by more sophisticated research and is no longer dominant.

In one sense, however, these arguments are almost irrelevant. The fact is that society has radically changed and it is now commonplace for both parents to work. No doubt the constant inflation is an additional spur. Thus the problem exists, here as in other western countries, and must be dealt with in one fashion or another.

According to the survey: "In the light of expanding need for day care services, it is understandable that the federal Government has been called upon to assume an active leadership role in assisting the provinces in this field."

It is less understandable that it has responded since responsibilities are divided in a federal system. The nature of the division suggests that public pressure might more reasonably be exerted in a different direction.

Day care centres vary widely in the programs offered, the major categories being full day care, lunch and after school, half day and occasional. But the majority are school-related, more than half being nursery schools. Education is a provincial sphere and nothing in our constitution limits responsibility to children over the age of five or six. Even if a centre is to be regarded primarily as a social service, the primary responsibility is provincial. The existing arrangement recognizes this at least implicitly since Ottawa plays a supporting role, sharing in such costs as rent, depreciation of facilities, program equipment, supplies, food, salaries and so on.

The report issued by Health and Welfare refers to the conclusions of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women: "Because the provision of day care centres is of major importance to the women of Canada, the Commission believes that the federal government should assume a continuing responsibility."

Obviously it is of major importance. But the question remains: Why the federal government?

It is not a persuasive answer to say that the provinces are not meeting their responsibilities. For in that case, the provincial governments should be called to account. Nor is it obvious that the federal government has some special role of leadership in matters normally within provincial jurisdiction. It was the provinces, whether wisely or not, which first ventured into the fields of medical and hospital insurance.

Tax Deductible

In fact the federal government has other means of assisting which do not threaten future confrontations. Perhaps the least controversial of the tax reforms now in effect is the provision enabling people to claim a deduction for day care centre costs.

But these shared cost programs, involving parallel bureaucracies, are another matter especially when Ottawa, having coaxed them into existence, becomes appalled by a sudden spurt of costs which it cannot control. The more responsibilities become entangled, the more unhappiness in federal-provincial relations there appears to be.

The federal government seems anxious at the moment to demonstrate the sincerity of its intentions with respect to the report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women. But considering the present state of relationships between Ottawa and a number of provincial governments, it might do better to redirect the recommendation on day care centres to the provinces. It is their problem constitutionally and the federal government surely has responsibilities enough of its own.

C. L. SULZBERGER

Part of a Global Process

PARIS — Henry, the proto-Kissinger, came to his job with an analytical brain, a brilliant reputation as a Harvard professor and considerable political experience. He worked for a while with President Kennedy but quit because he disagreed over de Gaulle. Then he became Nelson Rockefeller's foreign policy expert. Rockefeller recommended him to Nixon.

Kissinger arrived at the White House at an appropriate moment. Washington, which had experimented with Presidential agents before, was even more ready for the formula because the bureaucracy had become so swollen. Kissinger soon realized that one of his functions would be to drive this bureaucracy, above all the State Department, against its inclinations.

He saw that all around the world foreign policy was in the process of moving from foreign ministries to the office of the chief of government. What was occurring in the United States was part of a global process.

Original Duty

Kissinger originally regarded his primary function as that of eliciting options from various government experts and presenting these for Nixon's choice. The job grew as these options dealt with increasingly important matters and Kissinger became a roving negotiator.

The growth of his influence inevitably produced friction with the State Department. He had no desire to quarrel with Secretary Rogers, an old friend of Nixon, whereas Kissinger was a German-Jewish immigrant with a foreign accent who had previously been linked to Nixon's rivals.

But conflict was inescapable. Cabinet secretaries tend to be spokesmen for their own bureaucracies rather than Presidential spokesmen to their bureaucracies. Nor did the State Department like Kissinger dominating policy questions.

Kissinger contended he didn't formulate policy but only forced the President to come up with alternatives on a day-to-day basis as problems arose. Nixon had his own coherent philosophy on foreign affairs and didn't intend to be anyone's rubber stamp.

The White House developed a new kind of blueprint for long-term policy. This was featured in 1972 by the Presidential trip to Peking, which was regarded by Nixon as a bifurcation in the road, and to Moscow, which was regarded as a historical landmark. The Chinese option was held as essential to America's Soviet policy.

This conception heavily influenced the

HENRY KISSINGER
. . . a very particular manner

U.S. attitude during the India-Pakistan war. China supported Pakistan and felt that if the United States reacted against Soviet-backed India (as it did ineffectually), Peking could expect American reaction should China be attacked.

Washington also reckoned Moscow would get wrong ideas if it felt the U.S. was too weak to react at all for its ally, Pakistan. So the nuclear carrier Enterprise was sent to the Bay of Bengal as a token warning that India shouldn't attack West Pakistan. It was also believed this would discourage El Sadat from carrying out his promise to start another round of Palestine war.

These calculations were part of a global concept of American policy. They did not seek Indian enmity nor did they reckon on sudden Chinese fidelity. Washington continued to regard Japan as its permanent ally in the Pacific and saw China continuing as an opponent.

The decisions, when taken together, may be regarded as a kind of climax in the Presidential method of policy-making and cannot yet be assessed. Notwithstanding, in many ways the Kissinger approach has proven its value, particularly in winding down the Vietnam war.

It was the judgment of the Kissinger office — more than a year before the event — that Moscow would pull its immense military establishment out of Egypt. It was the Kissinger office that cooled a potential crisis with Moscow about a submarine base in Cienfuegos, Cuba. It now seeks to jar policy-makers into reckoning what may happen to Yugoslavia when Tito dies.

Kissinger Policy

Kissinger has become an international figure. The assembly of Western European union recently discussed "the very particular manner in which United States foreign policy is conducted by Dr. Henry Kissinger," adding: "On more than one occasion there has been evidence that Dr. Kissinger's own conduct of foreign affairs has been independent of the State Department, which may not always have been kept informed."

The point is there is nothing unconstitutional about it. That is simply the way Nixon, who is charged with making policy, wants to work. Executive diplomacy is practised increasingly in other countries. The grumbling heard in Foggy Bottom is by no means unfamiliar in other 20th century capitals.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Ignored?

The Superintendent and the Board Chairman of District 61 have apparently stated that the decision to permit Mr. Tom Curteis, principal of Willows Elementary School, to remain in his present position until he retires three years hence had nothing to do with the expressed wishes of the parents whose children attend Willows. This is, of course, an alarming situation. If the over 92 per cent of the parents who signed a petition to keep their principal do not influence the educational decision makers what kind of autocratic rulers are they?

The action of these people makes a mockery of the much ballyhooed involvement of parents in guiding and advising the Board. What is the value of Project Learning and Citizen Committees if when the crunch comes their advice is ignored? — A concerned teacher.

Animal Clinic

With reference to the news item in the Times of Jan. 18 headed "$50,000 for Strays".

It has been obvious for many years that the increasingly large grants made by the city for pound work involving the picking up and slaughter of thousands of innocent dogs and cats or so-called "strays" (who are often peoples' pets) should be used in a more constructive and civilized way. A number of cities in the U.S. have been greatly concerned with the above impractical method of handling this problem and have established low cost clinics for the neutering of dogs and cats and report a tremendous response. A Los Angeles councilman stated "self-supporting, public owned spay clinics are the only answer to the heart-breaking animal explosion which results in homeless and unfed animals roaming the city".

The United Humanitarians, Inc. of Phoenix, Ariz. have excellent plans for the setting up of spay clinics and have helped establish them in many U.S. cities. The figures from these clinics show many thousands of animals have been neutered to date, thus stemming the future tide of surplus dogs and cats. These spay clinic plans are available to anyone.

Other U.S. animal welfare societies have obtain the sympathetic cooperation of certain reliable veterinarians who do this work for special rates. I am informed the resulting large volume of business brings in an excellent financial return to the veterinarians.

It would greatly enhance the prestige of local animal welfare societies if they could get together and sponsor an animal birth control clinic for the neutering of male and female cats and dogs. Such a clinic would likely receive considerable sympathetic public support according to comments made to this office by concerned people.—Helen M. Kerswell, Vancouver Island Representative, The Animals' Crusaders, Inc. (International).

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Jan. 25, 1913:

LONDON — An awful state of affairs under the National Insurance Act was revealed during a recent inquest into the death of a laborer at Lambeth. Evidence disclosed that the doctor gave the sick laborer a useless powder without examining him, simply because he was overworked attending to cases brought under his jurisdiction by the Insurance Act. The doctor stated that when he was called to attend the ailing workman he had 300 people waiting to get medical tickets signed so that they might have their sicknesses attended to by the dispensers. In its verdict of accidental death the jury added that the doctor had been scandalously overworked.

The Money Is Flowing Like Oil

By RONALD KOVEN
The Washington Post

At a recent conference of European and American opinion leaders, former under secretary of state George W. Ball, now a Wall Street investment banker, facetiously offered an easy solution to the problems of the Middle East.

"Let the Arabs buy out Israel for $100 billion," Ball proposed. "That would come out to about $250,000 per family of five. And then resettle the Israelis in Northern Ireland."

"I have another idea," interjected John J. McCloy, former U.S. high commissioner in Germany and former chairman of the board of the Chase Manhattan Bank. "Why not let the Arabs buy up all the big western corporations — GM, Imperial Chemical and so forth. Then we'll expropriate them. Without compensation, of course."

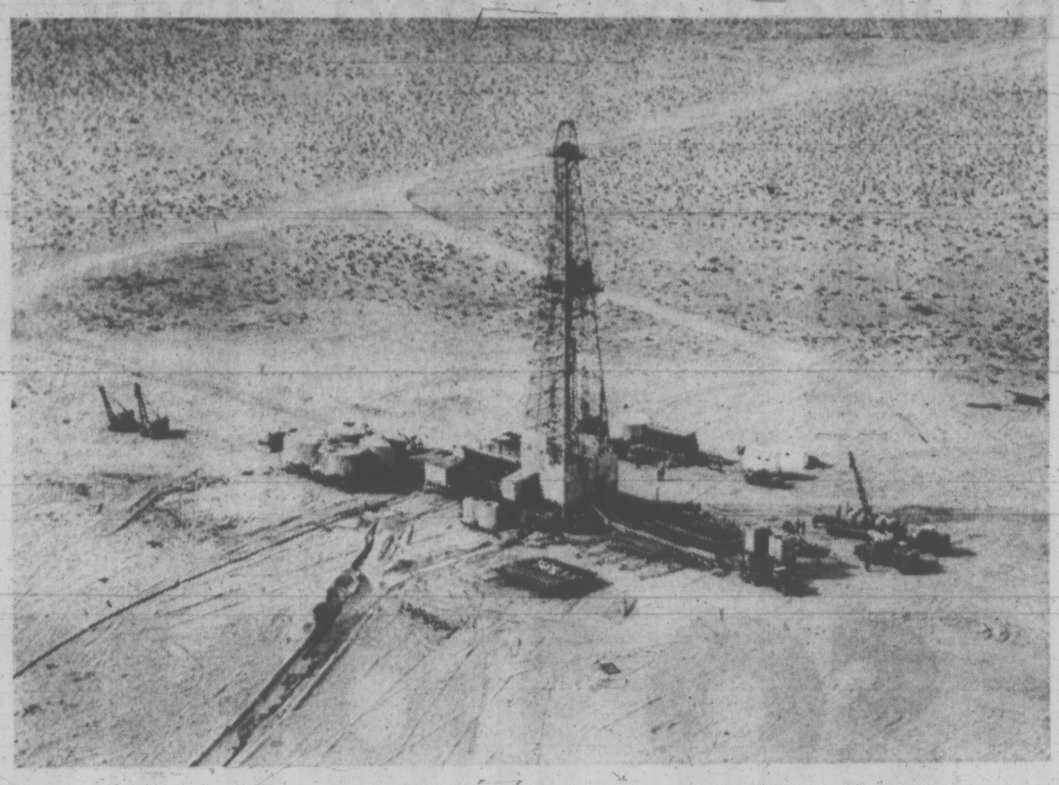
The jokes were about a serious problem that is only beginning to attract the attention of western leaders. As American, Japanese and European petroleum needs periodically redouble and other sources of supply dwindle, Middle Eastern desert oil sheikhdoms are going to find themselves amassing billions of dollars more than they need for improving the lot of their tiny populations, let alone for buying themselves more air-conditioned palaces, Cadillacs, yachts and executive jets.

The mischief-making possibilities of all that loose "camel money," as the New York bankers call it, can be nightmarish. It is easy to imagine tiny sheikhdoms using their funds as war chests to manipulate western currencies, to withhold oil for months or years as political blackmail or to finance armed insurgencies. The possibilities are endless; but the likelihood of all or even most of them occurring is uncertain.

The world energy crisis is one of the leading current topics of discussion, but there has been only a dim general realization that the reverse side of the coin is the accumulation of huge money hoards in the Middle East, like some latter-day caves of Ali Baba.

As the House foreign affairs Near East subcommittee put it in September, in the first congressional report on U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf: "Never before in the history of mankind have so many wealthy, industrialized, militarily powerful, and large states been at the potential mercy of small, independent and potentially unstable states which will provide, for the foreseeable future, the fuel of advanced societies."

Americans are used to thinking of the Arab world as a single unit of more than 100 million people. But the desert Arabs who are amassing the great bulk of the oil revenues number 10 to 12 million in Libya and the Persian Gulf. Saudi Arabia, which sits atop a quarter of the world's known petroleum resources, is the largest, with fewer than 8 million people, while no one knows the exact numbers in some of the remote emirates of the southern gulf.



Oil well in Saudi Arabia desert . . . quarter of world's reserves

The accumulation of massive oil revenues in states with such small populations is a consequence of the world energy crisis that has so far received little attention. McCloy, who has broad, high-level contacts in the Nixon administration, complained that he had yet to meet anyone in government who has given the matter serious thought. In fact, a small but growing number of officials at the White House, the treasury and state departments and the International Monetary Fund are thinking, talking and writing about the problem — largely among themselves, so far.

Except in some academic circles, few conclusions are offered. Official estimates must be based on all kinds of assumptions about the future — the price of oil, the amounts needed and produced, the spending and saving proclivities of the sheikhs, the Arab-Israeli conflict and the leftward drift of the Arab world.

One estimate, perhaps the highest, is that the Middle Eastern oil producing countries will earn one trillion dollars in less than 30 years. This estimate, recently cited by Robert O. Anderson, chairman of the Atlantic-Richfield Oil Co., seems to presume an unmodified continuation of all present trends.

The Middle East's monetary reserves have risen more than 50 per cent in the past 12 months. Saudi Arabia, for instance, has tripled its central bank reserves since January, 1971, to more than $2 billion.

George A. Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, referred to this in testifying before the Senate interior committee this month that "certain of the oil states are accruing large revenues which will eventually permit them to risk losses of revenue for considerable periods of time for political ends." Lincoln's warning was against organized oil boycotts, not against the damage that use of the money itself could do.

Oil boycotts head most lists of the potential disasters that the Arab world could inflict on the West. But many students of the matter consider an effective Arab oil boycott an iffy possibility at best. When it was tried after the Arab-Israeli war of 1967, the oil "leaked" in great streams from consuming countries not being boycotted to the nations the Arabs were trying to punish.

The state department view, however, is that after 1975 boycotts — even by one supplier at a time — could become more effective. This is because a consuming country's ability to switch to alternate sources of supply will become severely restricted as the world's spare producing capacity rapidly declines.

Nevertheless, money may prove a far more effective weapon than oil. Most oil scenarios involve a group of oil producers acting in concert. But a single country can apply monetary muscle against anyone to do as much damage with a production boycott, it first must make a consuming nation vulnerable by becoming its regular source of oil.

Even the strongest currencies can be subject to periods of weakness, and a sophisticated central banker can lie in wait for such a critical point to cause a run on another country's money.

Money, in many ways, is a commodity like any other obeying the laws of supply and demand. When a particular currency is a glut on the market at a given rate, the pressure is on for devaluation. Dumping more of the currency on the market, or even threatening to do so, leads to panic selling. Such behavior was a standard part of the foreign-policy weaponry among the nations of prewar Europe.

In the 1960s, Charles de Gaulle used France's reserves (then $6 billion, now $10 billion) to hurt the United States by cashing in French dollar holdings for gold. His example, it is generally accepted, was closely watched by Middle Eastern governments. It is alleged by some bankers that Israel subsequently turned the general's own monetary tactics against him, orchestrating the dumping of francs at a weak moment to retaliate against de Gaulle's embargo on arms for Israel.

A variant of such tactics was discussed recently at an Arab oil conference in Kuwait, according to James E. Akins, head of the state department's office of fuels and energy. Akins said, "The suggestion was put forward that Arabs should move their money around from bank to bank within a country 'as a warning' if the host governments were suspected of taking anti-Arab action. If this government, where the money was being held, persisted in its 'hostile' actions, the funds would be withdrawn."

Another of the nightmare possibilities is that Arab governments would enter Wall Street with the objective of political manipulation, buying stocks and dumping them, taking over companies that deal with Israel and so on.

Such punitive shifting of funds has already been employed by Libya's mercurial Muammar Qaddafi. A year ago, angered over Britain's allowing Iran to occupy three islands in the Persian Gulf, Qaddafi ordered Libyan funds converted out of pounds sterling. Estimates of the amount involved range anywhere from $300 million to $1.2 billion — precise intelligence in such matters is hard to come by. He now is said to be shifting his holdings into Eurodollars.

Qaddafi's monetary reserves total about $3 billion, which may not sound like a lot in these days of a $1 trillion U.S. economy. But Washington currently holds about $13 billion dollars in reserves for a population of 210 million, while Libya's $3 billion is supposed to cover the contingencies of a population of fewer than 2 million. U.S. reserves are enough to cover what economists consider a healthy minimum of three months' worth of American imports; Libya's reserves would cover 15 months of imports.

Qaddafi has announced that Libyan money bought arms for Irish Republican Army terrorists in Ulster. He pledged support for Malta in its negotiations to get more money from NATO for the Allied naval base on the strategic Mediterranean island. And there are signs that Libyan money has recently been used to sever Israel's ties to African nations.

As one highly placed Arab put it, why do you think all these African countries are suddenly cutting their relations with Israel? They didn't get a messenger from God. They got oil money.

In the case of Chad, Qaddafi publicly pledged about $90 million for the sparsely-populated country. Saudi Arabia's King Faisal recently visited Niger, another of the five African countries that have broken with Israel. The king reportedly left $10 million as a gift.

Arab oil money has already been in use for some time to finance the Palestinian guerrilla movements and their terrorist offshoots. There is so much loose change in the Persian Gulf that even a small fraction of it devoted to guerrilla activities can produce significant results.

Arabs Getting the Muscle To Give West a Bad Time

'Let's Put an End to the Homosexual Hoax'

By DANIEL CAPPON

(Cappon is professor of environmental studies at York University. He wrote this article for The Toronto Star.)

You certainly can fool some of the people, much of the time. Even some of the best people, like a section of the British public and the government of Canada.

The faction of the population suffering from homosexuality, which calls itself homophile, provides a capital example.

Here they are, true victims of emotional sickness in the family and in society, casualites of their environments, wanting to turn their aberration into a right, if not actually a virtue. To hear them talk (and they talk a lot because this is a feature of homosexuality, especially in a physically deprived, fearful or cowardly male) you'd think that this disorder is a valuable asset. At least you'd think they are being abused and persecuted by a hostile society.

Now that they have become militant, like so many other aberrant factions; now that some of them say there is nothing wrong with seducing a youngster into a homosexual "way of life," it is time to call a spade a spade.

The British have promulgate laws liberalizing "consenting homosexuals" (whatever that term may really mean when applied to people who feel inwardly compelled to a sex deviance).

The British were bamboozled, but good.

Liberal Canada followed suit. The government has upped the mother country on this one. They gave homophiles Local Initiatives Program money in order to promote themselves.

But it seems this is not enough for the militant homophiles. They want more recognition, more approval, more rights. In fact, they wouldn't mind converting the whole world to their "way of life." The more naively wishful thinking homophiles like to think that the whole world is latently homosexual anyhow, just waiting for their liberation movement to be released into the true way.

What do they really want? They want to legitimize sodomy and fellatio between members of the same sex — and whatever equivalent manoeuvrings that women can do with each other.

Why? In order to make themselves feel better. Well, you might say, what's so wrong with that? Let them, if that's the only way they can feel better. No skin off our nose, so to speak, so long as we are strong enough not to become corrupted.

But youngsters are not strong enough. They need protection from deviant predators.

And society isn't strong enough, not when it is assaulted from all quarters, as it is.

I'm not suggesting that homosexuality is the last straw. There are too many other straws. But we can do without this one. So get this one right, in proper perspective, once and for all.

Let's stop the homophile bamboozling. Let's put an end to their tiresome whining, aided and abetted by the media. One may say, with scientific backing, that militant predatory male homosexuality is no more than the behavior of overcrowded rats. This is one thing some mammals do in order to reduce their numbers. It is also what oversuccessful civilizations have done in the past when they reached their apotheosis and when they became decadent.

It is part of the Fall. After debauchery and decadence, there is decimation and infertility, then revival and revitalization, both for rats and men.

But in Canada, the second largest land mass in the world, accepting (indiscriminately) waves of immigrants, one cannot claim even the virtue of infertility for this basic sickness. Besides, Canadians are cautious and inhibited enough as it is. We don't need the homophile hoax.

Also, a touch of homosexuality corrupts a little and absolute (exclusive) homosexuality corrupts absolutely. It is not possible to suffer from a deviance (in terms of sexual object) of such magnitude without every other mental function becoming skewed, at the same time. Especially does the function of morality, the conscience, get twisted.

The most obvious twist is the homophile's desire to help himself at all costs, merely to make himself feel better, at the expense of everyone else. It is at the expense of everyone else because it is quite impossible to condone, let alone sympathize with homosexual activity and allow its promotion by homophiles, without fouling up the healthy, normal foundation both of sexuality and of morality.

And both these functions in individuals and in society are strained enough as it is, without the importunities of homophiles, foisting their sickness onto the common pool of social pathology.

The worst of this all too successful manipulation of public opinion by homophiles is that it is an ill wind which brings nobody, but nobody, any good.

By that I mean the homosexual potential patient himself is the most hurt by this movement.

First, because a great number of innocent young people think they may be "homosexual" when in point of fact, they are not. Yet the homophiles would draw them in, subvert and damage this essentially normally sexed person, who merely fears homosexuality. This subversion no less than the perversion of the young is criminal.

Second, the most important lever that can turn a homosexual person into a patient with a fair chance of cure, is social disapproval and rejection. If the inner pain given by the twinges of the homosexual's consicience is repressed, drowned, drugged inside him, by the faulty mental defences of denial by lying to himself then the disapproval of society is the only thing that can evoke it.

And pain is good. It signals disorder, disease. It draws attention to a source of illness. Stilling pain without treating the disorder is deadly. Moreover, this disease is clearly infectious.

For all these reasons, medical, psychiatric and social, society and the public will have to straighten themselves out of the homophile twist.

Wholesale condemnation, persecution or punishment is one thing. It is wrong because homosexuality, contrary to the claim of homophiles, is an absolutely involuntary disorder. Its essential feature is a person being misdirected toward the same sex. No one, but absolutely no one, chooses to become a homosexual person. He develops this condition, this tendency.

But acting it out, doing it and most of all, proclaiming it, selling it, promoting it, these are not involuntary. These are volitional, damaging actions.

Confused liberalism and gutless permissiveness are no substitutes for the old-fashioned but still highly serviceable virtues of common sense and sanity.

The Passion to Buy

By RICHARD NEEDHAM
The Globe and Mail

I've changed in many ways since I started writing these daily pieces some nine years ago, changed my opinions on many things, too, as I trust all the readers have. The guy who thinks exactly what he thought a year ago is dead, better bury him. But there's one respect (among several) in which I haven't changed; I don't buy things. Kindly note I said, "things"; I buy services like meals and haircuts; I buy bus tickets and hotel accommodation; I buy newspapers and magazines, booze and cigarettes.

But not things. No clock or watch, no TV, no radio, no car, no tape recorder, no portable typewriter, no suitcases (everything I need on my travels goes into a CN shoulder bag). My idea of a big spending spree would be to purchase a pair of shoelaces, a 10-cent comb and a couple of ballpoint pens. That's my peculiarity and I'm allowed it, just as you're allowed your passion for liverwurst sandwiches at midnight or your habit of reading Penthouse in the executive washroom.

You are also allowed your passion for buying things, which makes the wheels of commerce and industry go round. This passion has with many or most Canadians become an addiction; they're compulsive purchasers, buying things without regard for whether they need them, for whether they can afford them, for whether they really want them. Canadians buy things in the same mood as George Leigh Mallory, who when asked why he wanted to climb Mount Everest, replied with admirable brevity, "Because it's there."

The purchasing passion gets stronger all the time. Canada's big department stores did 15 per cent more business last December than they did in the December before; same thing in the United States. Nor was there any post-Christmas lull. Eaton's and Simpsons reopened on Boxing Day, I visited both, and almost got trampled to death. Some merchants claimed they did a bigger business the day after Christmas than in any day before it.

Isn't this one of the reasons for our present inflation? People love buying things, regardless of need and indeed regardless of price. (My sons think nothing of paying $25 for a pair of shoes; I'd expect to be struck dead.) If people are going to buy things — feed their habit, as it were — they've got to have the money, and dear old Ottawa and Washington keep churning it out. Just as the guy who likes driving feels the authorities should furnish highways for him to do it on, so the guy who likes buying things feels the authorities should furnish the dough.

Again, the guy who likes driving (or golfing or drinking or eating) figures he has the right to do it at any time, and on any day, he pleases. People who like shopping feel the same way, which is why so many stores are now open evenings and Sundays and holidays. In many parts of the States, the department stores do a massive trade on the Lord's Day. Mayor Willis Blair of East York thinks Toronto should resist this trend, but I think he'll no more stop it than Canute stopped the North Sea.

As I say, it's a passion, it's an addiction. It's also a means of alleviating the massive boredom which afflicts a society with plenty of time, as well as money, on its hands. Shopping's something to do, the stores are somewhere to go. When a great blizzard strikes a city, the store clerks can't make it to work, but a whole army of women shoppers get through and bang imperiously on the doors for admission. Again, I've often thought and said that if there were some great disaster, and the stores had nothing for sale but colored rocks, people would come storming in and fight to purchase them, and carry them home in their arms.

What some enterprising store might do is to give people play money as they entered; they could then choose and buy anything they wanted. They wouldn't be allowed to take it home, of course; but they could have all the fun of buying it, and while they were at it, they would likely spend some real money, too.

A Change Of Policy

THE SUN
An Editorial

Although a victory for conservation in its own right, the government order halting logging operations on the Indian River on the west coast of Vancouver Island may be more important for what it portends than for what it immediately achieves.

The practice of logging river banks is common to all parts of the province and so is the resulting damage to our system of waterways from erosion, inadvertent damming and pollution by logging debris. When it's a salmon-spawning stream that is ravaged, as is the case with the Indian River, it is both a catastrophe and a mockery of proclaimed principles of sane multiple use of land resources.

It was usually no contest in the past when conservationists clashed with industry over river bank logging. Even when a company volunteered to leave a strip of trees along a river as a conservation measure — as actually happened last November — the provincial forestry department, for reasons known only to itself, would order them cut down anyway.

Stripping of river banks, of course, is only one of many acts of vandalism that industry, and individuals, and even government, inflict on our vulnerable waterways. But Mr. Williams' decisive action with regard to the Indian River is a promising step toward the sophisticated management that he talks about.

Building Ban Urged on Flood Plains

Flood plains should be preserved as greenbelts, and not used as building sites, View Royal director Gar Bulmer told the Capital Regional District Board Wednesday.

He made the proposal after the board received a letter from P. D. Simpson about a recent flooding along Marler Drive, beside Craigflower Creek at the Trans-Canada Highway.

Langford director Earl Pallister said the provincial government approved the subdivision on the basis of an engineering report, although "the area has always flooded."

The board decided to get a copy of the engineering report, also to have the local works and services committee study the suggestion to maintain flood plains as greenbelts.

In other business, a change in cost sharing was approved for the proposed regional garbage disposal system.

Under the plan, still to be approved, the regional district would become responsible for garbage disposal and could raise half a mill a year, or $272,000, for the costs.

Board directors had approved apportioning the cost on a straight population basis among the component areas. But some directors, led by Saanich, sought reconsideration of this.

It was finally agreed that costs should be shared on the basis of 75 per cent population and 25 per cent improvement assessments.

The board also named three persons to represent Greater Victoria on an urban transit committee. They are chairman Jim Campbell, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen and Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford.

Campbell said the committee is being established by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer and will include representatives from the Greater Vancouver Regional District and B.C. Hydro.

The regional board reorganized its own committees into smaller numbers than last year, when all 18 directors sat on the main committees.

This year's committee chairmen are: regional planning, Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning; regional parks, Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford; public works, Saanich Ald. Leslie Passmore; local planning and zoning, Marc Holmes of Salt Spring Island; local works and services, Dick Emery of Colwood; and executive committee, Jim Campbell.

The board also discussed the possible hiring of a full-time information officer, and after 40 minutes debate, went into closed session to decide who to hire.

Afterwards, district executive director Dennis Young said the board turned the matter over to the executive committee with power to act.

The district advertised for a full-time or part-time information officer late last year after Jim Hume, who acted as information officer and secretary to the board, resigned.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen led opposition to the hiring of an information officer, saying it was unnecessary and "an impediment to the democratic process."

He said a public relations firm could be hired for specific purposes, such as the referendum on hospitals in late March.

But Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said an information officer is needed to provide two-way communication, both from the board to the public and vice-versa. He said there are no PR firms in Victoria competent to do a major job, so an outside firm would have to come in without first-hand knowledge of the local scene.

And Esquimalt Mayor Art Yeung said the "regional principle is not getting over to the people, or to the elected people. Part of the fault of this board is that we have not sold regionalism to the people."

NWT Railway Mulled

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — A railway is being considered by Ottawa as an alternative to the Mackenzie Highway linking the Northwest Territories with the Arctic coast, the territorial council was told Wednesday.

Dr. Louis Edmonton Hamelin, director of the Centre for Northern Studies, said the federally-appointed Council of Environment had recommended a one-year stall on highway development.

During debate on a $309,000 supplementary appropriation to cover costs related to the Mackenzie Highway, Dr. Hamelin warned that construction on the 700-mile highway to the Beaufort Sea might be delayed at least a year.

Hamelin stressed he was repeating the views of the council and not simply stating his own views. The council's members are drawn from universities and industry across Canada.

A territorial government crew working to clear right of way north of Fort Simpson for the highway has been stalled since Christmas by a government slowdown order. Men involved in the project have been cleaning up the route already cleared.

Death Toll Not Record

AMMAN (UPI) — Jordanian national Alai Airlines today issued conflicting death toll figures in Monday's 707 jeltliner crash that would make the accident no longer the worst aviation disaster on record.

When the plane crashed at Kano, Nigeria, aviation officials in the Nigerian capital of Lagos said 180 of the 202 persons aboard were killed. That would have made it history's worst airline accident.

But Alia officials today said "not more than 156" persons were killed. That would be 20 less than the previous record of 176 who died in the Oct. 13 crash of a Soviet Aeroflot jetliner near Moscow airport.

Meat Inspection

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta will begin a province-wide program of meat inspection in February. The cost will amount to an estimated $250,000 anually.

FINAL TRIBUTE TODAY FOR LBJ

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lyndon Baines Johnson, honored by tens of thousands who braved a cold and windy night to file by his casket, flies home to Texas for the last time today and a resting place on the banks of the Pedernales River.

Johnson, who died Monday of a heart attack, receives his last tribute in the capital where he served as 36th president with a state funeral today at Washington's National City Christian Church. His body then will be flown to Texas for burial under a huge live oak in the family cemetery 100 yards from the house in which he was born 64 years ago.

The Texan's body lay in state throughout the night in the capitol. Mourners by the thousands — many of them blacks and many of them young — waited in line for as long as an hour to pay their respects, shivering in a north wind and temperatures in the low 30s. They filed at a rate of several thousand an hour past the flag-draped closed casket in the capitol rotunda.

Johnson's daughters, Lynda Bird and Luci, and their husbands, spent a few minutes Wednesday evening greeting the mourners.

Tributes to Johnson continued. In Albuquerque, N.M., civil rights leader Charles Evers of Mississippi, brother of the slain Medgar Evers, said Johnson was "the best president the black people and the poor people ever had." He added: "It's too bad the war destroyed him."

The Rev. Billy Graham, the evangelist with whom Johnson, as president, shared many personal moments, was in Texas preparing for the final services there, which he would conduct.

Today was a national day of mourning, with the federal government and many schools closed.

Oak Bay Stands Firm Against Fuller Brush

Fuller Brush salesmen will receive no special privileges in Oak Bay, in spite of support from Mayor Frances Elford.

Council's finance committee stood firm today in its recommendation to council Monday night that Fuller Brush Co. Ltd. be required to meet licensing regulations.

The company had asked that it be allowed to post $1,000 surety bonds instead of the $1,000 in cash required for each salesman.

At Monday's meeting Mayor Elford supported the company's request, saying that she, like many housewives in Oak Bay, used the firm's products and liked them.

On her guidance the matter was referred back to today's meeting.

Municipal administrator E. H. Hart said he had consulted the licence inspector, who felt it "would be a backward step" if the company was allowed to post surety bonds.

He said the municipality had experienced "a great deal of trouble with this particular firm" about a year ago when they had saturated the area with salesmen under their student-training program.

He said a surety bond was no safeguard against similar problems.

"They don't pay it, the insurance company does, they're not worrying about it."

Ald. Norman Pimlott noted that the company, before the students were used, had two salesmen in Oak Bay and there had been no problems. He said the legislation was necessary to guard against problems from any salesmen, referring to a magazine company that had also posed problems.

Hart suggested that instead of posting cash, companies could post negotiable securities for the required amount.

The committee decided to recommend to council that companies be required to post either the cash or negotiable bonds.

Oak Bay to Tighten Rules on Boarders

Oak Bay council's zoning committee today took the first step toward tightening up regulations on the number of boarders allowed in dwellings in the municipialty.

The committee decided to ask municipal solicitor D. M. Gordon to draw up legislation that would prohibit boarders in apartments, and only allow them in condominiums and duplexes that are big enough and have sufficient parking.

Action was taken after building inspector Bill Skead said he was concerned about the number of adults that could be housed in side-by-side duplexes and apartments.

Present zoning allows two boarders to be kept in single-family dwellings but does not spell out any restrictions for apartments or duplexes.

He said that he had brought the matter up because of a recent visit to a home, being illegally used as a duplex, with an abnormally large number of people living in it.

Municipal administrator E. H. Hart told the committee that Skead and the Oak Bay police had visited the house, given the occupants seven days' notice to conform. He added that this was the seventh day.

Hart said there was a need for boarders in the municipality because of the close proximity of the university.

Ald. Norman Pimlott agreed but said there was a definite need for control.

Ald. Brian Smith asked Skead how other Greater Victoria municipalities handled control.

Skead replied that he understood Saanich was concerned about the number of illegal suites in their municipality, adding "it looks as if the thing is running wild."

LONE SNIPER CLAIMED IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS (AP) A local television station reported Wednesday night that New Orleans police have concluded that only one sniper was involved in the Jan. 7 shootou at the Down Town Howar Johnson Hotel in which si persons were killed and mo than a dozen wounded.

However, a spokesman for the police department, officer Carol Gorman, said she had no information on any such conclusion.

$20M Spending Cleared

Special warrants totalling almost $20 million in provincial government expenditures have been approved by the cabinet.

The warrants, covering extra expenditures in several areas of government activity, were approved at a cabinet meeting Monday and announced Wednesday.

Largest single warrant is one for $10.5 million, covering expenditures on social assistance. Another $6.1 million goes to the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

A total of $1,110,000 goes to extra costs in the administration of justice and $1,000,000 to maintenance costs, including $500,000 for rentals.

Education costs total $435,905, while other expenditures include the community recreation branch, the safety inspection division, Crown lands servicing and temporary assistance.

Interest Rates To Climb: Bank

MONTREAL (CP) — The prime rate and short term interest rates in general should go up, Russel Harrison, chief general manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce told a luncheon meeting of the Montreal Society of Financial Analysts Wednesday.

"Pressures on the Canadian dollar and the level of interest rates in United States are exerting a sufficient pressure to push short term interest upward," he said.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 388-3551. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. Both my boat and car are worth more than $1,000 each. Should I therefore place a December 31, 1971 value on them.

A. The new law states that one-half of capital gains on personal-use property will be taxed. However, losses will only be allowed on listed personal properties as defined in the act. These items are, works of art, jewellery, books, stamps and coins.

As the boat and car are not listed personal property, any losses realized on them will not be deductible for tax purposes.

If a gain is anticipated on the sale of the boat or car, a Dec. 31, 1971 value should be determined. If it is likely that the boat or car will decline in value, there is no need to determine a Dec. 31, 1971 value as no losses are allowed on personal use property.

Q. I know I should have received a personalized income tax return because I have filed a return for the past 10 years. However, either I have not received it or I have lost it. What do I do now?

A. You should obtain a form either from a post office or your district taxation office, and complete and file it.

Q. Regarding the new tax on capital gains, what if I acquired property before January 1, 1972, at a cost of $2,000 and I find that the property was worth only $1,000 on valuation day. If I should later sell this property for $2,500, will my capital gain in this case be $500 or $1,500?

A. In this example your capital gain would be $500, the actual gain over your period of ownership, one half of which would be taxable.

Q. How would I be affected if I acquired an investment before January 1, 1972, at a cost of $800, the fair market value of the investment on valuation day is $400 and I sell the investment at a later date for $300. Do I have a capital loss of $500 or $100?

A. In this case you would have a capital loss of $100, the difference between the fair market value on valuation day and your actual selling price, one-half of which, or $50, would be deductible from income.

Q. What happens if I sell my home at a price greater than it cost me? Am I going to be taxed on any profit or gain that I make?

A. No. If a taxpayer uses his home only as his principal residence, that home together with up to an acre of surrounding land, if the land contributes to the use and enjoyment of the home, will be exempt from capital gains tax.

Q. What do you mean by the term principal residence?

A. A principal residence will generally be considered as any type of structure owned by the taxpayer and ordinarily inhabited by him.

Transport Utilities Urged for Mills

MONTREAL (CP) — Pulp and paper companies were urged Wednesday to consider setting up transportation "utilities" among themselves to create economies of scale and thus lower costs.

R. H. Donnelly, of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., said transportation accounts for 15 to 20 per cent of the cost of a ton of newsprint.

Donnelly, introducing a panel discussion at the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association annual meeting, said distribution arrangements involving several companies may provide at least part of the answer.

"Even a 10 per cent drop could result in a saving of between $1 and $2 a ton, so the payoff is big," Donnelly said.

He also said the industry would be wise to consider means of transportation that could move other commodities when pulp and paper products are low.

A U.S. shipper said the use of coastal tugs and barges to transport paper products is gaining in importance in part because "rail transport has not been productive enough to keep delivered costs competitive."

R. W. Hooper, of the Interstate Oil Transport Co. of Philadelphia, said the "recent use of barges especially designed for newsprint has made a considerable impact."

Hooper said barges have been used for some time on the West Coast, but further developments could adapt barge transport to other cargoes and make it a profitable means of distributing paper products on the East Coast.

Better Than Politicians?

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada needs more entrepreneurs willing to work long hours and risk their families' assets to make profits, Andrew Kniewasser of Toronto, president of the Investment Dealers Association of Canada, said here.

"Somehow we have to get the message across that the businessman who works long hours and risks his family's assets to make profits — a good thing, not a bad thing — to employ people in satisfying work is just as worthy of public acclaim as an athlete, an entertainer, an educator or perhaps, with respect, even a politician."

Kniewasser told the city's Chamber of Commerce that Canada has great resources and opportunities.

". . . But not much is going to happen unless we have entrepreneurs, large and small, to take risks and make things happen."

CONTROL RESOURCES

He also said opportunities for Canadians to invest in development of the country now are better than they were in the 1960s. There is, therefore, a greater opportunity to control the country's own resources, he added.

"In many countries Canadians are appreciated for their traditional quiet, self-conscious humility. Perhaps we should break out.

In Canada, we have probably perfected to the highest level achieved in modern history, the technology of identifying the frustrations and shortcomings of our society to ourselves and to the world. Everybody does it and it is only on rare occasions that we think positive and identify the great things we have achieved and have going for us."

Record Car Insurance Sales

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's automobile insurance agents wrote a record $135 million worth of premiums in 1972 and probably will set records again this year, but the outlook for the industry has never been dimmer.

On the surface, it's a paradoxical situation, but it isn't so puzzling when one recalls the New Democratic Party government's previously-announced intentions to set up government car insurance.

There is, however, still optimism among insurance industry spokesmen, with most insisting they will continue to operate much the same, with few staff layoffs.

For example, N. L. Heron, manager of the Vancouver branch of the Toronto-based Shaw and Begg insurance group, said his company has made a firm decision to stay in B.C., regardless of whether the government mounts a complete takeover of auto insurance.

Heron said his company has an "agency survival plan" designed to help agents conduct their business when government insurance takes effect.

However, insurance companies find it more difficult than agents to survive government insurance, spokesmen say, because agents can still act in the purchase of government insurance and in the purchase of coverage above the government-set minimum requirements.

Donald Yocum, general manager of Safeco, which claims it was forced out of Manitoba when government auto insurance began there, said his company will stay in B.C.

Yocum said his company will remain, even in the event that private companies are given no access to writing above minimum coverage, despite the potential loss of $5.5 million in premiums.

The important thing, he said, is that there should be an orderly transition period between private and government insurance.

Yocum, and other insurance company spokesmen, said they would like to see private companies allowed to remain competitive with government insurance, although they doubt this will happen.

Other companies have indicated they will attempt to stay in business, but won't make any promises about keeping their staffs. Some say they might be forced not to hire new staff to replace workers who retire or quit.

Russians Promoting Vodka Sales

TORONTO (CP) — Three Soviet officials are visiting Canada to promote sales of Soviet wines, liquor and brandy, Russell Woodman, district manager of Gooderhams Import Company, which markets Soviet brands in Canada said Wednesday.

Leonid Kairuk, director of the wine and vodka department, Soyuzplodoimport, Moscow, Peter Bachurin, director of a liquor plant in Moscow, and Georgi Tushmalishvili, chairman for the Republic of Georgia of the Soviet Ministry of foods, are trying to get liquor licencing authorities in Canada to list their brands at government-controlled retail stores.

The Soviet Union sells its Moskovskaya vodka in every Canadian province and has Ukrainian vodkas listed in Manitoba.

IRAN MAY FORCE OIL CONCESSIONS

BEIRUT — In a dramatic reversal of his previously co-operative attitude toward western oil companies, the Shah of Iran says he will refuse to extend western-held oil concessions in Iran when they expire in 1979.

The Shah, ruler of the world's second largest exporter of petroleum, also raised the threat of an immediate takeover of his country's oil industry if the companies do not agree to double production and increase what they pay now for Iranian oil.

His reversal of policy could, in the view of American and Arab experts, rip apart the agreements that have been painstakingly negotiated over the past two years in a bid to guarantee a steady supply of Middle East oil to the industrialized world over this decade and beyond.

The announcement comes at a time of increasing concern in the United States, Europe and Japan over sources of energy. President Nixon is due to deliver a major policy statement on energy within the next month.

★ ★ ★

Iran ranks behind Saudi Arabia as the major oil producer in the Middle East. Less than 5 per cent of American oil imports currently come from that region, but that figure is expected to increase sharply by 1980. And American companies make up a major part of the western consortium that produces oil in Iran.

Speaking to the closing session of the "white revolution" Congress in the Iranian capital of Teheran, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi said that "under no circumstances would he extend the 25-year agreement his country signed with the oil consortium in 1954.

Iran has decided to take over the oil industry, currently producing about four million barrels of petroleum a day, and run it independently, the Shah said.

The oil compoanies would then have to "line up" and take their turns as "our customers" instead of controlling production, the Shah added.

Sources in the oil industry report that the companies are especially bitter over the Shah's demands, delivered to them privately two weeks ago, because they feel he has gone back on an agreement in July to guarantee the company's production role unit 1994 in return for major new investment in Iran.

★ ★ ★

His militancy could also make life more difficult for American companies in Libya, who are facing new demands from that North African country for part nationalization, as well as complicating current negotiations between western oil companies and Iraq over the seizure of an extensive western-owned field there last June.

The Shah made a clear reference to the advances other countries have made in the escalating campaign to reduce the importance of oil companies in the Middle East by telling the congress that Iran now demands that its oil income per barrel must equal that accorded to other countries in the region.

He also said that production would have to be increased to 8 million barrels a day, news agencies reported from Teheran. If these two conditions were not met, the Shah indicated that he would not feel bound by the existing agreement.

Iran, with a population of about 30 million currently receives about $2.1 billion a year for its oil output.

Hockey: The Kelly Case —For Reasons Unstated

Johnny Wilson didn't go, but Red Kelly did, and that made it 18 firings for National Hockey League coaches in three years.

You may recall the recent reference here to the weird pattern in the NHL whereby people who own hockey teams suddenly, after a few years, seem to know more about the game than people who have been in hockey all their life.

This fact, in itself, isn't new. It's old hat — in hockey, in baseball, in football, and in other sport. But now it has been stated again — by Kelly, when he fired his last volley after being fired by the Penguins.

The most peculiar part of the affair is that Kelly was in only the second year of a five-year contract. And now the Pittsburgh Club not only has to pay the new coach, Ken Schinkel, but it also has to honor its obligations to Kelly.

This includes paying him the princely sum of $140,000 for the next three and one-half years for doing exactly nothing.

If it's not a bad future, financially, for Kelly, it's absolutely ridiculous, otherwise, and one of the great mysteries of sport.

Nobody will ever understand why owners do this. They just keep on doing it, that's all. Leo Cahill, for instance, put the Argos in the Grey Cup two years ago, after a long drought, didn't last year, and now is getting paid for doing the same thing as Kelly — nothing.

Otherwise, He's a Fine Guy

As for Kelly, what was his sin? Nobody is telling that either. The official statement from the owners was: "We don't feel the team is playing up to its potential."

That covered a multitude of nothings. After all, when Kelly left, the Penguins were just five points out of second place in the NHL West, and only a mere two points in arrears of fourth-place Los Angeles. As it is now, the Penguins are just about in the same position — six points out of second, and five out of fourth. So there isn't any appreciable change, and neither was there expected to be.

Instant experts are funny that way — firing people in mid-season, with no apparent good reason.

On the other hand, it's obvious that no team which will continue to pay an ex-coach for three and one half years, would have done such a thing without having its reasons.

General manager Jack Riley intimated as much when he said: "We had our reasons . . . which were more than what were said . . . but there was nothing detrimental to Red's character, because he's a fine guy."

Make out of that what you will. It fits the same mold as some of the other firings. Totally unpredictable.

Meet the Champs—Cooke, Finley

Jack Kent Cooke is one of the champs. He fired Kelly in 1969 after Kelly had gotten the Kings into the playoffs. Cooke then hired Laycoe only to fire him after 24 games. Laycoe was to get paid for doing almost nothing for two years when he opted to Vancouver. After Laycoe, there were Wilson, the GM himself, Larry Regan, Fred Glover, and now Pulford.

But if things have been strange in L.A., what about Oakland?

When Charles O. Finley bought the Seals in the summer of 1970, he also got a coach in the deal. It was Fred Glover.

The next season, Glover was gone, Vic Stasiuk was in and Garry Young was the general manager. Now Stasiuk is at Vancouver, Young is back with the Boston organization, and the team is being run by Mr. All-Everything.

That's Glover, again, who is vice president, manager, and coach.

You figure it out. Quickly. Because with Finley the next chapter probably is being written right now.

It might even include Kelly. But it won't include Wilson. That's almost certain.

For if Wilson was seemingly on his way out six short weeks ago, his Red Wings are flying now, and he's the toast of the town in Detroit.

Besides, the Wings are crowding Buffalo for the fourth playoff spot. If they get it, what about Wilson?

Gee, he may even be "coach of the year."

Stay tuned. It's a crazy season.

IT'S MINOR HOCKEY WEEK and youngsters like these Mini-Tykes at Juan de Fuca are what it's all about. Showing off form are (left to right) Dennis Rogers and Paul Cox, both 3 years old, and Scotty Whyte, who is 5. Each Monday 124 boys learn hockey fundamentals.

When Mini-Tyke Teams Hit the Ice It's About as Minor as You Can Get

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

If minor hockey is your bag, the Juan de Fuca Mini-Tyke Division is just what you're looking for. It's about as minor as hockey can get.

They just don't come any younger, at least on Vancouver Island and probably across the rest of the country.

There are 124 boys ranging in age from 3 to 6 and they go at it every Monday morning and afternoon at Juan de Fuca.

The emphasis is on learning.

"We aren't interested in creating a competitive situation for them," explained Laurie Bates, one of the originators of the division.

"Minor hockey starts at age 6 at Juan de Fuca but there is nowhere for boys to learn before they enroll," Mrs. Bates continued. "Up in the five-year-old group, the boys might play the odd scrimmage game so they can become acquainted with the rules, but there is no organized league. It's all learning sessions."

The idea is to teach as many fundamentals as possible before a boy graduates to organized minor hockey.

The boys are grouped according to ability and a lot of time, naturally, is spent on skating. The kids bent-ankle their way all over the ice, around plastic cones and at the end of each other's hockey sticks.

They even learn how to fall properly.

"We feel this is important," Mrs. Bates said, "because it can help prevent a child from becoming badly hurt."

The boys also get a session on how to care for their skates.

Three coaches—Larry Franco, Bill Mundy and Len Barret — are in charge of the sessions. They are assisted by a dozen boys from Belmont Secondary School through the community recreation-Grade 12 assistance program.

Mrs. Bates and a group of six to eight other minor hockey mothers got the idea to form the mini-tykes over a year ago.

"We wanted to get the boys going so they'd be ready for minor hockey when the new arena opened last fall," Mrs. Bates said. "We were putting out feelers to see if the idea would be beneficial."

It was. From an original group of 40 boys, the program has increased more than threefold and now is affiliated with the Juan de Fuca Minor Hockey Association.

Twenty-five of the youngsters will be on display at Schmockey Night Jan. 29 at Memorial Arena. If they perform anything like they do at their weekly workouts, they'll be the hit of the show.

Variety Spices the Entrees On Weekend's Sports Menu

Variety is the spice of life on the sports menu this weekend.

Among the entries are two events connected with the B.C. Festival of Winter Sports.

Top gymnasts from B.C., Washington and Oregon will be in town for a display beginning at 8 p.m. Friday at the YM-YWCA and competition from 1 to 8 p.m. Saturday at Oak Bay High School.

The other "festival" event is the B.C. boys' water polo championships Saturday at Crystal Pool. Playoffs start at 9 a.m. while semi-finals are scheduled to take place between 6 and 10 p.m.

If squash is your forte, the two-day Western Canada junior championships will be staged at the Racquet Club starting Friday at 5 p.m. Play resumes at 9 a.m. Saturday and competition should be down to the semis in the afternoon. Consolation finals are slated to start at 9 a.m. Sunday and championship finals begin at noon.

Basketball fans have a choice of two top local events this weekend.

The inaugural Tillicum high school boys' tournament, featuring three lower mainland teams as well as Esquimalt Dockers, Claremont Spartans and Mount View Hornets, gets under way with games at 6:30, 8 and 9:30 p.m. Friday at Claremont. Action continues Saturday with games at 11 a.m., 12:30, 2, 7 and 8:30 p.m.

Scorpion Men's Wear, the Victoria senior "A" men's basketball team, faces Bellingham in two exhibition encounters on the weekend at Belmont High School. Game times are 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Cross-country enthusiasts must wait until Sunday for the fourth annual 21-mile mixed medley relays, beginning at 1 p.m. on the Dallas Road side of Beacon Hill Park.

Also on tap are two university sports events.

The Canada West University Athletic Association women's volleyball tournament starts Friday at 2:30 p.m. in the University of Victoria gymnasium and continues from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday.

UVic Vikings are back in action in the CWUAA hockey league this weekend with games slated for 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 4:30 p.m. Sunday against Calgary Dinosaurs at Memorial Arena.

First Goal Means Nothing to Cats

There are many coaches in hockey who feel there is an important psychological advantage in scoring the game's first goal.

Could be, but Victoria Cougars refuse to take advantage of the early lift.

Cougars have counted the game-opening goal in four of their last five Western Canada Junior League games, but continue to look for a victory on their current road trip to the Prairies.

The tough, seven-game swing winds up Friday when the Cougars play the Pats in Regina.

Don Dzaidyk gave the Cougars the first goal again Wednesday night in Swift Current, but the Broncos rapped in the next four to skate off with a 4-2 victory and stretch Victoria's losing streak to seven straight games.

Elsewhere in the league, Mike Rogers scored three times to spark Calgary Centennials to an 8-2 romp over Winnipeg Jets while Saskatoon Blades padded their Eastern Division lead with a 5-3 victory over Brandon Wheat Kings.

Dzaidyk's goal stood up for a 1-0 lead until Dave Williams scored on a power play late in the first period. Bryan Trottier came back 96 seconds later and the Broncos never looked back.

Brian Back, scoring late in the second, and Brent Leavins, clicking in the opening minute of the third period, made it 4-1 before captain Dale Cook closed out scoring with his 36th goal of the season.

Cougars were served well by goalkeeper Perry Mulhall but played without two forwards. Jim Van Camp, who lost three teeth in Tuesday's 6-2 loss to Saskatoon, and Al McLaren, sidelined again by the flu, both missed Wednesday's game.

Van Camp is expected back in action Friday while McLaren will remain a doubtful starter until game time.

Broncos took six of the game's 11 penalties and outshot Victoria 37-23.

Don McLeod's two goals sparked Saskatoon to its 14th victory on the road, establishing the Blades as the league's best road team.

At Calgary, the Jets held Calgary to a 2-2 stalemate with less than 11½ minutes to play, but the Centennials broke open the tight-checking affair by scoring six straight goals.

New York Displays Perfection

By Canadian Press

Vic Hadfield called it "perfect hockey," and there were few in the crowd of 17,500 or a Canadian national television audience who would deign to argue the point.

The New York Ranger captain was analysing the conditions Wednesday night after a 4-2 victory over Boston Bruins in a match-up of National Hockey League division contenders.

The victory moved New York four points up on third-place Boston in the East Division race and Hadfield contended:

"We played a perfect hockey game."

The contest, however, wasn't decided until Walt Tkaczuk scored into an empty Boston goal with Bruin netminder Ed Johnston on the bench in favor of an extra attacker as the defending Stanley Cup champions battled for the equallizer.

Elsewhere, Montreal Canadiens romped 6-1 over New York Islanders, Vancouver Canucks tied the Black Hawks 3-3 at Chicago, California Golden Seals doused Atlanta Flames 5-2, Pittsburgh Penguins beat Toronto Maple Leafs 5-2 and St. Louis Blues took a tree-scoring 7-5 decision over the Kings at Los Angeles.

Goals by Brad Park and Bill Fairbairn in the second period, Fairbairn's coming with the Rangers playing short-handed, broke up a tight duel between Johnston and New York's Ed Giacomin.

Boston's Wayne Cashman, who was in the penalty box for Park's power-play score, brought the Bruins back to within one with his 18th of the year in the third period.

"We controlled the play and ground it out, just like a football team grinds out yardage," said Hadfield. The rugged winger didn't score in the game but picked up assists on two goals to give him 500 career points.

He explained that each skater has "a section of ice that is our responsibility" and that to produce the most effective hockey "you must play your position."

"That's fundamental. That's what we stress and that's what we did tonight. That's how we're supposed to play every game. I would call it perfect hockey."

Montreal overcame the fired-up Islanders after a scoreless first period when Chuck Lefley, Guy Lapointe and Henri Richard bolted the East Division leaders into a 3-0 lead.

The Canadians steered 32 shots at New York goaltender Gerry Desjardins to again snuff out the Islanders' win streak at one game.

The win maintained Montreal's seven-point lead in the East over runner-up Rangers.

Three second-period goals by Vancouver, two from Richard Lemieux, wiped out a 2-0 deficit. It appeared the lead would hold until Jim Pappin notched his 25th of the season with less than three minutes remaining to pull Chicago even.

The Penguins had little trouble at home with Leafs after Bryan Hextall scored the first of his two goals at 4:14 of the second period to break a 1-1 tie and made it 3-1 with his 16th of the year early in the third period.

Injuries plagued the Leafs from the early moments when goaltender Ron Low was lost after colliding with Lowell MacDonald. Defencemen Joe Lundrigan and Larry McIntyre played only briefly because of injuries and veteran Jacques Plante, who replaced Low, continued playing despite a bruised ankle.

IN BRIEF

Coach Signed By Als

MONTREAL (CP) Marv Levy, an assistant coach with Washington Redskins of the National Football League until his recent resignation, today was named head coach of the Canadian Football League Montreal Alouettes. The appointment of Levy, 44, who never played professional football, ends a two-month search by the Montreal club to find a replacement for Sam Etcheverry who resigned in December after three years as head coach. Terms of Levy's contract were not disclosed at today's news conference, other than that he had signed for three years.

Rangers Bow

AMSTERDAM (AP) — European Cup champions Ajax of Amsterdam Wednesday night beat Glasgow Rangers, holders of the European Cup Winners Cup, 3-2 in a friendly soccer game. The match, second-leg game for the so-called "Eurpean Super Cup" offered by the Amsterdam daily De Telegraaf, was watched by some 40,000 fans. Ajax won the first leg last week in Glasgow 3-1.

Short Cut

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cougars of the World Hockey Association fired Ed Short as general manager Wednesday and said the position will be shared by the club's two owners, Jordon and Walter Kaiser. Short, one-time general manger of Chicago White Sox baseball club, joined the Cougars last spring.

Trainer Irks Ali

PHILADELPHIA (AP) Muhammed Ali says he has suspended his trainer, Boudini Brown, for going to the George Forman-Joe Frazier heavyweight title fight without his permission and begging the new champion to fight Ali. Ali said he was told that Brown jumped into the ring after Foreman stopped Frazier in the second round of their Monday night fight in Jamaica, and asked the winner when he was going to fight Ali.

Lynn Trailing

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Four-time senior women's champion Janet Lynn of Rockford, Ill., found herself in second place after the compulsory figures in the 1973 United States Figure Skating Championships Wednesday. Miss Lynn, 19, was trailing 16-year-old Diane Goldstein of Denver, Colo., with four judges picking the Colorado girl first and the remaining three going for the defending champion.

Matte Traded

BALTIMORE (AP) — Veteran Baltimore Colt running back Tom Matte was traded Wednesday to San Diego Chargers. The Colts said they would receive an eighth-round draft choice in exchange for the 12-year veteran. Matte, 33, has spent his entire National Football League career with the Colts.

Variety and Trophy Fish In North Island Streams

While variety of angling is a feature of streams from Parksville to Courtenay, those streams that reach the coast between Courtenay and Sayward offer even greater variety, along with fish of trophy size.

Providing perhaps a wider selection of angling targets than any other section of Vancouver Island, this northern area supports late runs of big steelhead during March and April, except in the Campbell-Quinsam system, where the sea-run rainbows begin arriving in late November.

Fishing with wet or dry flys for cutthroat trout is excellent in summer and fall on the Oyster and Salmon rivers. Although overgrown with streamside brush, Black Creek and Trout Creek permit good cutthroat fishing throughout. On Black Creek, two miles upstream from the highway, lies Northy Lake, where coho salmon, steelhead and cutthroat can be taken.

Summer and fall fishing for cutthroat can be outstanding in the estuaries of the Black, Oyster, Trout and Salmon. Surf-fishermen, using fly-casting or spinning tackle, take coho in the fall off the mouths of the Oyster and Little River.

Dolly Varden char, forming a distinctive east coast fishery, are readily taken from the Salmon and White in the summer and fall. A rare run of summer coho moves up the White and the silvers are caught through autumn months. Summer steelhead in small numbers are taken in the Puntledge, Oyster, Campbell and White.

★ ★ ★

Twelve miles north of Courtenay turn left on Endall Road for access to Northy Lake. Access to Black Creek is from Miracle Beach Park, either to fish the estuary or the stream.

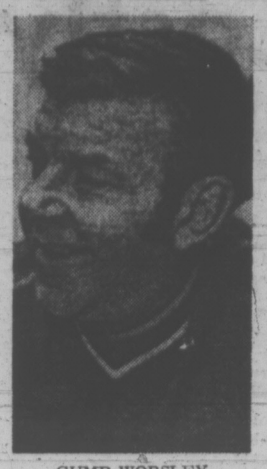
Midway between Courtenay and Campbell River the highway crosses the Oyster River. This is a high quality angling stream allowing float and drift fishing and excellent for the fly. Cutthroat all year, but best during summer nd fall; coho during October and November; winter steelhead January to May. Approximately fifteen miles of angling water accessible from Macauly Road on the south or the Iron River Road on the north.

The Campbell River and its major tributary, the Quinsam, are accessible from the Gold River Highway. Additional access to the Quinsam is by the nursery road. The Vancouver Island record steelhead of 28 pounds came from the Campbell while the Quinsam annually provides many fish over 20 pounds.

Ten miles north of Campbell River the highway crosses Trout Creek, where angling water is limited to about one-half mile above the highway.

Twenty miles north, the angler first views the Salmon River, which drains the immense Sayward forest. Access to the Salmon River is from the highway where it runs close to the river, or from the logging company mainline road on the northwest side. The Salmon is recognized as the trophy stream on Vancouver Island, providing anglers with many many steelhead over 20 pounds. Steelheading begins in December but peaks in March and April. Best cutthroat fishing is above the log jams where the highway first parallels the river.

Ten miles north of the Salmon Valley, the angler has access to the Adam and Eve rivers via controlled-access logging roads. The Adam has impassable falls limiting angling water; but the Eve has just recently become recognized as a river rivalling the Salmon.



GUMP WORSLEY

Can't Do Job, Gump Quits

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Gump Worsley, veteran National Hockey League goaltender, is retiring from Minnesota North Stars, general manager Wren Blair announced Wednesday.

The 43-year-old netminder has played only 12 games for the North Stars this season while Cesare Maniago has been carrying most of the load with rookie Gilles Gilbert as backup netminder.

"He's been a great goaltender and I am very reluctant to accept his wishes," said Blair after a late afternoon meeting with Worsley.

"I am leaving the door open — maybe I can change his mind. I'm not going to send in the voluntary retirement papers just yet."

The 5-foot-7 inch, 180-pound Worsley, one of the last of the unmasked goalkeepers forged a 6-2-3 won-lost-tied record with the North Stars early this season before suffering a pulled hamstring muscle.

Last Thursday in Philadelphia, the Flyers skated to a 4-0 first-period lead, and North Stars coach Jack Gordon took Worsley out of the nets.

"I came to the point where I don't think I can do it anymore," said Worsley.

"I don't want to take the club's money under false pretenses. I would be letting everyone down, losing the players' money."

Worsley was acquired by Minnesota from Montreal Canadiens midway through the 1969-70 season after the goalie threatened to retire rather than accept a demotion to Montreal's American Hockey League farm club.

Claude Ruel, then Canadiens coach, had wanted Worsley to play himself back into shape after failing to apply himself in Canadiens practice sessions.

"I'm going to put them in the playoffs," Worsley vowed when he joined the North Stars and his 2.65 goals-against average in eight games did help Minnesota gain a playoff berth.

"I got him three years ago to hypo us into playoffs, and he did," said Blair.

"He was a great asset to the team. As a general manager, it was a privilege to have Gump play for me. I hope he decides to stay in hockey. There is a place for him in our organization."

Blair said he would offer Worsley a scouting position if he could not convince him to change his plans.

Hall-of-Fame Election Spahn's Greatest Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Stylish left hander Warren Spahn, winner of 363 major league games, scored what he called "the greatest victory of my life" Wednesday by being elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Spahn, star with the Boston and Milwaukee Braves, was a landslide choice, named on 316 of 380 ballots of the Baseball Writers Association of America. He won 20 games in 13 different seasons and is the winningest lefthander in history.

A 75-per cent vote is required for enshrinement at the Baseball Hall in Cooperstown, N.Y., and the 51-year-old Spahn had 83 per cent.

Whitey Ford, one-time clutch hurler of the New York Yankees, came close in his first shot at the Hall with 67 per cent. He got 255 votes and a total of 284 was required.

"Nice going, Spahnie," Ford told the newest Hall of Famer. "Maybe Mickey and I can go to Cooperstown as a two-man entry next year."

Mickey Mantle, the Yanks' powerhouse slugger during Ford's era, becomes eligible in 1974.

Spahn's first chance at the Hall of Fame was delayed by two seasons due to his brief appearances in the Mexican League in 1966 and with Tulsa of the Pacific Coast League in 1967.

"Those were stunts, attempts to draw more fans into the ball park," he said. "I'm in the Hall of Fame, that's all that matters. Better late than never."

Ralph Kiner was a high also ran for the fourth straight time. The ex-Pittsburgh home run king had 235 votes, the same as last year, and was next behind Ford.

The late Gil Hodges, former Dodger first baseman and manager of New York Mets, was fourth with 218 and Robin Roberts, a 20-game winner six straight years for Philadelphia Phillies, was fifth with 213 in his first shot at the Hall.

"Cooperstown ... it's great to be there," Spahn said after the announcement. "My head on a plaque behind Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson and all the others. What more can a man ask?"

Spahn was born April 23, 1921, at Buffalo and began his minor league career as an $80-a-month pitcher for Bradford, Pa., in the Class D Pony League.

ENGLAND TIED BY FIERY WELSH

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — England's World Cup soccer hopes slumped Wednesday night after a labored 1-1 draw against unrated Wales in a qualifying match.

For long periods, the lowly Welsh squad appeared set to stage a major upset after John Toshack put them into a 20th minute lead with a simple goal from close in.

Wales last beat England more than 17 years ago. Both teams still have to play two matches each against Olympic champions Poland in further qualifying matches for the final stages of the World Cup.

Poland is considered a tough opponent and England will have to fight for every point to be sure of qualifying.

England won the first leg against Wales 1-0 in November.

For much of the game, particularly in the first half, the fiery Welsh forwards made England look sluggish.

The England forwards were slow to build up set-piece attacks and striker Martin Chivers had the 62,000 fans in Wembly Stadium groaning when he tripped over his own feet and missed a wide-open goal from less than a yard out.

England's best defender, Norman Hunter, apparently exasperated at the poor efforts from his forwards, moved into the attack in the 40th minute and scored a dramatic equalizer with a scorching shot into the roof of the net from 30 yards out.

Sharks Losing Money But It's Paying Off

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dennis Murphy and Los Angeles Sharks have lost money in this initial year of the World Hockey Association yet the president of the club smiles when he tells of it.

"Our strategy was to get people to come to the games," Murphy said during an interview. "We wanted to expose our product the first year, get people hooked the second and make money in the third.

"So far our attendance has been more than we expected."

Approximately 5,200 people have been at the Sports Arena for each of the Sharks' 21 home games. Murphy makes no bones about the fact that all weren't full-paid tickets. There were, and will be, promotion gimmicks to draw people at reduced prices.

"We have about $750,000 in the Sharks' operation now and we had budgeted $1.4 million," Murphy disclosed. "To break even we would need an average of about 7,000 full paid at each game. But for the first year, we expected an average of 3,000 and we're well above that."

Murphy, one of the prime movers in the American Basketball Association, said: "If we had crowds like this with basketball, we'd have been overjoyed."

Looking ahead, the sports promoter foresees pay television as the coming money maker for professional athletics.

"It is the next big step," he said. "That is why so many owners are acquiring franchises in more than one sport.

"If I were a man with big money, I'd make sure I'd get a sports franchise particularly in one of the contact sports."

Murphy said that in southern California alone, pay television offers a possibility of 10 million homes, and "if you sold only two per cent, you'd earn quite a few dollars; it would be absolutely unreal."

For now, Murphy figures the Sharks will lose $600,000 in their first year, but said that actually the club had figured on $700,000.

"Next year we hope to cut those losses in half and in the third year we hope to break even or a little better."

Murphy could be doing some wishful thinking, but it's factual that the number of people attending hockey games in Los Angeles — the established National Hockey League Kings and the Sharks of the WHA— has doubled.

In getting started and bucking the NHL, the Sharks have a player contract salary schedule averaging about $26,000 a man, said Murphy, adding that the budget for playing personnel on his club is one of the lowest in the league.

"But we also had to spend about $180,000 in bonuses to get them to sign," he asserted.

Even with his money troubles and the competition with the NHL club across town, Murphy declares:

"Between the Kings and us, we're doing a heckuva job in building southern California interest in hockey."

Blazers Begin To Catch Fire

Bu UP International

Johnny McKenzie and the Philadelphia Blazers finally are beginning to make an impression on the World Hockey Association.

After a good deal of fanfare when they signed such former National League stars as McKenzie, Derek Sanderson and Bernie Parent, the Blazers fell flat on their face once the season started, quickly falling to the bottom of the Eastern Division.

But the Blazers are on the way back and by whipping Quebec Nordiques 6-4 Wednesday night they climbed within three points of fifth-place Ottawa Nationals. In addition, Philadelphia is now only six points behind the fourth-place Nordiques, putting them in position to challenge for a playoff berth.

McKenzie, who also got off to a slow start due to his dual role as player and coach and because of injury, led the Philadelphia victory with three goals, lifting his goal total to 16. His first goal in the opening period gave the Blazers a 3-1 lead, then, after Quebec drew even, he scored twice more with a three-minute span of the final period to provide the winning margin.

Andre Lacroix had two goals for Philadelphia, his 32nd and 33rd of the campaign, and Parent stopped 41 shots.

In the only other game Wednesday night, New England Whalers moved into a tie for first place with Cleveland Crusaders in the East by routing the West Division leaders from Winnipeg 6-1.

All Blacks in Romp

NEATH, Wales (Reuter) — The New Zealand Rugby Union All Blacks took command in the second half to rout a combined Neath and Aberavon side 43-3 Wednesday.

The All Blacks, who led 15-3 at halftime, ran up a total of seven tries and a penalty goal to equal their previous highest score on the current tour, against Midland Counties East.

Fullback Joe Karam scored one of the tries himself, converted six and landed the penalty goal for an individual total of 19 points. Bob Burgess scored two tries and other tries came from Ian Kirkpatrick, Grant Batty, Ian Hurst and Mark Sayers.

Firing Prothro Costly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tommy Prothro was fired Wednesday as coach of Los Angeles Rams and the National Football League team named Detroit Lions' assistant Chuck Knox as his successor.

Knox received a multi-year contract but no details were announced by the Rams, who apparently must pay Prothro at least $90,000 a year for the next three years to fulfill contract obligations.

"As soon as I heard the news this morning, I called my attorney and turned the whole thing over to him," said Prothro, who was hired from UCLA two years ago after a successful collegiate coaching career.

Marvin Meyer, Prothro's attorney, said he plans to meet with Rams' attorneys but otherwise had no comment.

* * *

Carroll Rosenbloom traded ownership of the Baltimore Colts for the Rams last summer in a unique National Football League transaction. At that time, the new owner said one of the reasons he made the deal was because Prothro was under a five-year contract.

He cooled on the coach during a 6-7-1 season when the Rams beat the tough teams and lost to the also-rans. In his first season with Los Angeles, 1971, Prothro had posted an 8-5-1 record, better than expected.

Rosenbloom has had good fortune in hiring assistants as head coaches at Baltimore — Weeb Ewbank, Don Shula and Don McCafferty. The latter led the Colts to a Super Bowl victory but was fired this last season.

* * *

Shula, coach of the Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins, and Knox are from somewhat the same mold with similar coaching backgrounds in college and as assistants.

Prothro, 52, drew criticism for failure to motivate his club properly and lack of motivation was blamed for losses to New Orleans, St. Louis and Denver.

Knox, 40, served four years as an assistant with New York Jets. The new head coach was a lineman at Juniata College at Huntingdon, Pa., and is credited with rebuilding the Detroit offensive line into one of the best in the National Football League.

Druce, Harknett Tops on Island

VANCOUVER (CP) — It was a good bet to own British Columbia-bred race horses competing at Exhibition Park last year.

The provincial attorney-general's department released figures through the British Columbia Racing Commission, Wednesday, to show three owners collected more than $7,000 each as the result of legislation passed in March which directed one per cent of the pari-mutuel wagering to B.C.-bred horses.

Largest single earner, with $8,045.87, was the L and M Stable, owned by Les and Mary Gilmore of Richmond.

Most money, however, $8,683.99, went to Wm. H. MacDonald of Langley, who raced horse of the year That's A Promise, in partnership with his wife, as well as being a partner in other horses.

Russell J. Bennett of Kelowna was third largest earner, netting a cheque for $7,371.31.

Mr. Bennett's father, former premier W. A. C. Bennett, made what he termed a "spontaneous offer" last February to remove a five per cent wartime wagering tax, and redirected one per cent to go to B.C.-breds finishing in the money.

Under the former plan, one per cent went to all horses regardless of where they were bred.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Druce of Victoria collected $3,882.29 and Colwood Stables, operated by George Harknett, took $3,702.29 as top Vancouver Island earners.

Mussoc's Promises, Promises Maintains Quality Standards

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Promises, Promises is Marek Norman.

In his lead role as Chuck Baxter in the University of British Columbia Musical Theatre Society's (Mussoc) presentation of the Broadway musical, he's just plain likeable.

Wednesday night's opening at McPherson Playhouse was a tremendous success and if the performance is as good during the next three nights, Mussoc will again have presented some of the finest entertainment the McPherson stage has seen.

That's par for the course for Mussoc. Anyone who saw their last three Victoria performances — Hello Dolly, West Side Story and Fiddler on the Roof — expects nothing but the best. They haven't let us down yet.

As Chuck Baxter, a young, misguided, gullible, naive junior executive, Norman wins the sympathy of the audience and carries the entire show from one scene to the next.

Every movement, speech and facial expression is so natural and genuine it seems as though he has just walked off the street into an unrehearsed late-night talk show.

His loose, easy contentment places the audience in an aura of comfortable involvement that begins with the first scene and ends with the last.

Burt Bacharach's music, directed by Paul Douglas, is an emotional aid for the actors.

Douglas is careful not to divert the audience's attention from the actors to the musicians by overplaying the orchestra.

The sound track is merely a supportive background for the various roles which holds the performance together.

Both the chorus and orchestra are excellent.

The choreography by Grace Macdonald is well-rehearsed, organized and lively but in a few scenes the stage seems slightly overcrowded.

There is one major downfall in Promises, Promises — Norman's leading lady, Gillian Lucas.

As a third-year Music Education student, Miss Lucas' Mussoc debut as a performer doesn't make it.

Her awkward discomfort in her role as Fran Kubelik, Chuck Baxter's loved one, breaks the continuity of several scenes.

Every movement, every speech and every song is stiff and totally unemotional — she is not Fran Kubelik.

Her voice is weak, often offkey and her last song, I'll Never Fall In Love Again, is almost embarrassing for the audience.

She relies heavily on the rest of the east to get by.

There are so many good performers in Promises, Promises that it's virtually impossible to mention them all. It's a great musical for a young company and will be remembered with Mussoc's other great productions.

TRIO FEATURED

A two-part recital involving three of Victoria's most notable artists will be held Friday at Craigdarroch Castle.

It is one of the winter series of chamber music concerts presented by Trio Victoria and featuring senior members of the Conservatory of Music faculty.

A song cycle by Alban Berg, Sieben fruhe Lieder, will be performed by soprano Catherine Young with pianist Winifred Scott.

Berg, early 20th century Viennese composer whose operas, Wozzeck and Lulu are modern masterpieces, wrote the seven songs of the cycle early in his career while studying with his only teacher, Arnold Schoenberg.

The program will be completed with Winnifed Scott and Robin Wood performing two piano duets.

"The duet repertoire is a very great one," Wood points out. "Far more fine music has been written specifically for four hands on one keyboard than for two pianos."

On this occasion the duettists will perform Debussy's Six Epigraphes Antiques and the great Fantasie in F minor which Wood describes as unquestionably "one of the best of all Schubert's works for the keyboard."

The program will begin at 8 p.m. There is no admission charge but donations may be made to the scholarship and bursary fund.

Gordon Head Protection Plan Backed

Gordon Head residents appear to support a Saanich council proposal to make the district a special plannig area to protect its character.

The first of six discussion periods offered by Saanich municipal planning department was attended Wednesday afternoon in Gordon Head Recreation Centre by more than 35 persons who dropped in to give their views to senior planning staff.

There was "tremendous reaction," said assistant planner Gil Laurenson, who observed that those who turned out were ordinary residents and not representatives of pressure groups.

"They want the protection of an over-all plan and we are getting a lot of discussion about a lot of different things," Laurenson said.

"I think we're getting the real reaction here. They are accepting the principle set down by council that this area should be protected."

He felt there had been many misconceptions about what is proposed for the northern part of Gordon Head, lying roughly between Feltham, Shelbourne, Mt. Douglas Park and the seafront, now consisting of semi-rural, undeveloped, partly agricultural and residential land.

The special designation proposed by council would ensure the retention of an essentially residential character, providing within strict limitations for complementary multiple family dwellings and commercial undertakings.

This had been construed by some as meaning plans for an elaborate shopping centre were being considered. Laurenson explained this was not the case, that the intended size would be around five acres as compared with 11 acres and more for existing centres in the capital; that it would hopefully be less like a shopping plaza than a pedestrian-oriented place.

Planner Tom Loney, also pleased with the reaction, said it would be a matter for council to decide but he hoped the conversational technique would become common practice in future situations.

"It is an experimental thing but first reactions often guide future actions," he said. "Many residents were appreciative of being able to come out in a very early stage and make a point with us."

Some of the assorted subjects raised by residents dealt with schools, essential services, beach access, open land, free use of waterfrontage, protection of children by means of paths or sidewalks, limiting density of multiple-family dwellings.

By means of a map series posted on the walls of the board room residents could get a comprehensive picture of northern Gordon Head's existing inventory of assets. The charts depicted utilities, land use, transit routes, traffic densities, undeveloped acreage, subdivision control areas and zoning, with an aerial photo and a special map illustrating construction by age group since 1945.

'Hate to See Farmland Go'

Mrs. Gene McMaster, 4555 Bissenden, who said she had lived in the area for 10 years, preferred the semi-rural, single family character of the district.

"I hate to see the farmland go, but that's what is going to happen," she said.

She would have to think further about the proposed commercial area before she formed an opinion about that.

A man who did not wish to be identified said he, too, was concerned for population density in view of planning department projections. Within the next six to 10 years population is expected to double to 12,000.

The resident said he felt two-storey multiple-density use would be acceptable within certain areas, but no more than that. The effect of heavy density is to increase service costs such as sewerage and to raise taxes, he said.

Mrs. Britt McLean, 4131 San Ardo Place, said she would like to see the area remain single family with no commercial or shopping facilities and no multiple density dwellings.

Sam Dumka, 1419 Mt. Doulas Cross road, newly-appointed member of the Saanich Advisory Planning Commission, and a Greater Victoria vice-principal, was concerned about co-ordinated planning for schools and community facilities.

He urged that where possible vacant waterfrontage be kept for public use and enjoyment even though it may mean costly outlays on the part of the municipality.

Another session with planning officers will be held in the same place Friday, 2-4:30 p.m., and again on Monday and Wednesday of next week at the same hour.

In addition there will be evening sessions, 8-10 p.m. Monday in the auditorium and Wednesday in the clubroom.

ANTIQUES GET $90,000 SOAKING

VANCOUVER (CP) — Antique Chinese furniture, paintings, other art works, ivory and jade valued at $90,000 were found submerged under 12 feet of water and walnuts Wednesday when a hold on the Greek freighter Aegis Bravery was opened here.

It is believed a crew member turned on a wrong valve shortly after the vessel left China, flooding the hold by mistake.

"The effect created a giant mixmaster as the ship crossed the Pacific," one of the ship's agents said.

"We have grave doubts whether we can salvage any of the paintings and objets d'art."

General cargo included 360 tons of walnuts, 129 tons of soccer balls, musical instruments and other Chinese goods.

Sidney Parking Debated

Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce has joined the mainstreet parking debate in Sidney with a resolution to continue angle parking until a master plan for redevelopment of the downtown is drawn.

The chamber action follows a meeting of Sidney council and local merchants last week to discuss parking changes recommended by the provincial highways department.

A switch from angle to parallel parking on at least one block of Beacon Avenue is urged by provincial engineers in order to improve traffic flow.

The department has said that expenditure of $250,000 on reconstruction on the upper arterial section of Beacon is not justified unless such a parking change is made.

Local merchants are against the change because of a loss in the number of parking slots.

According to businessman R. G. Cook, they feel the highways department is "holding a gun at the town of Sidney's head."

Mayor Stan Dear has agreed to discuss the matter with deputy highways minister Tom Miard.

Amnesty Set

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The Hong Kong government announced a two-week amnesty Monday for people wishing to turn in unlicensed firearms, ammunition, explosive substances and other offensive weapons.

BENEFICIARIES PRAISE ART BANK

Five Victoria artists, among the first in Canada to have their works bought by Canada Council's art bank, say they heartily approve of the $5 million purchase program.

"It's a good program," said Pat Martin Bates, who had a series of female figure drawings chosen for the bank.

"There's always a great flurry of activity when artists know something like this is happening."

Art works worth $669,500 have been purchased so far in the first year of art bank, which plans to spend $1 million a year for five years.

Purpose of the scheme, according to the Canada Council, is to "assist professional artists by purchasing their works and to give the public the opportunity to enjoy contemporary Canadian art displayed in public buildings."

All the art will be rented to departments and agencies of the federal government for public display.

John Dobereiner, a UVic professor who had a large painting chosen by the bank, says he thinks the program will be good for artists, and none of them "will make a lot of money out of it."

"The best point about it," he said, "is it will put art into some of these ghastly federal buildings."

The only other alternative, Dobereiner said, might be to make every new federal building spend 2 per cent of its costs on art.

Another UVic professor, George Teissen, who had several screen prints chosen by the bank, said he felt it was too early to tell how successful the scheme would be but it was a good way to get art out to the public.

William Featherston, who had 30 works purchased by the program, said the bank needs far more money to be successful.

"A million dollars is just peanuts — they spend more on dog hospitals.

"Artists are in the lowest echelon of pay," Featherston said, "they make less than most unemployed people.

"They put billions into unemployment — they should put 10 times as much into the art bank."

The fifth Victoria artist to have his works chosen, Maxwell Bates, said the bank's funds were adequate and he couldn't think of a better way to spend the money.

Colin Graham, director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, was a member of one of the bank's advisory committees and says they are "insisting on a very high level of quality."

"There's plenty of money in the bank," Graham said. "There'll be no trouble finding work for the first couple of years but I don't know if the artists of this country can produce that much art to keep the bank going in its fourth and fifth years.

Customs Office Move Delayed

The federal government will not remove the air freight customs service at Victoria International Airport until complaints from local businessmen and the chamber of commerce have been investigated.

Earlier this month customs officials notified major users of the service that, effective Jan. 29, parcels received by air freight or parcel post would have to be cleared through the Victoria office. Better use of staff was cited as a reason for the change.

Sidney and North Saanich chamber of commerce cabled Donald Munro, MP for Saanich Esquimalt, and Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury last weekend asking for immediate reconsideration of the decision.

Cliff Gregory, supervisor of the eight-officer customs team in Sidney, said that the proposed change would not mean staff cuts. There are two men, each working two shifts, at the airport to carry out customs inspections.

The supervisor estimated the proposed change would affect about 25 importers.

On Tuesday the chamber received a wire from Stanbury promising no change in the service at Sidney "pending my personal review of the matter."

Alex Effa, acting superintendent for outside service in the Victoria customs office, said another assessment was being made of the whole situation.

LITTLE GIRL KILLED TO GET AT FATHER

QUESNEL (CP) — When Charles David Garry Head was in the British Columbia Penitentiary, he said he killed 7-year-old Tanya Busch, a fellow inmate testified Wednesday.

Tanya, the daughter of Klaus Busch, a guard at the penitentiary, was last seen alive in Vancouver June 2. Her body was found June 14 in Surrey. Head, 27, who was on a four-day pass from Agassiz Prison when she disappeared, is charged with her non-capital murder.

Bruce Alian Kaiser, 27, who is serving 43 years at the penitentiary, told the B.C. Supreme Court jury that Head hated Busch.

"He was one of his worst enemies in the institution."

After the discovery of the girl's body, Kaiser said he told Head it was too bad "a snake like Busch" had not been killed instead of the child.

Kaiser said Head replied: "People who enjoy seeing other people suffer should be made to suffer themselves. When you kill somebody they don't suffer. He's going to suffer for a long time."

When Head said this, he looked "kind of funny", said the witness.

Kaiser testified that he said: "Charlie, you mean you got that kid?

"He just looked at me and said: 'Yeah, I got her.'

"I said: 'Did you kill that kid?'

"And he said: 'Yeah, I killed her like that.'"

At this point the witness made a wringing motion with his hands.

Asked if he was telling the truth, Kaiser replied: "I'm serving 40 years. A perjury charge wouldn't make any difference to my term."

Trio Hired to Kill—Crown

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The prosecution said Wednesday in B.C. Supreme Court that three men charged with murdering William Tupniak, 27, and his fiancee Marilyn Jean Peters, 24, were hired to kill Tupniak.

Prosecutor Jerry Pettenuzzo said in his opening address to the jury that Robert Charles Smith, 26, Ronald Philip Joseph Sauve, 31, and David Brian George, 26, were hired by a man who found out his wife and Tupniak had been having an affair.

The bodies of Tupniak and Miss Peters were found last March 28 by a neighbor at Tupniak's home in Surrey. Both had been shot and stabbed.

Two RCMP identification officers testified Wednesday that they had taken photographs at the home and of a car. One officer said he found fingerprints of one defendant, Smith, on the steering wheel of the car. Under cross-examination by defence counsel Ken Young, he said he had not uncovered prints of Sauve in the car.

The trial continues.

Johnstone said companies and organizations donated $37,560, individuals contributed another $20,855, and TEAM got another $2,500 from its own fund-raising events.

The business man who usually takes cabs.

Donald Morrison, company president. Donald does a lot of flying in the course of his business. But when he used to arrive at his destination, he'd always take a limousine downtown, use cabs to go from meeting to meeting. Then when it was time to go home, he'd take another limousine back to the airport. But then Donald heard about the Avis flat daily rate. It didn't take him too long to figure out the savings. On his most recent trip, he rented a sparkling new Plymouth Fury III for one day, drove himself downtown, did 79 miles and paid just $15 plus gas. That's all. Think about it.

Together people who don't own a car of their own.

Bob and Peggy Byron live in a big city high-rise. Weekdays, Bob and Peggy use public transportation.

But at weekends it's another story because they're ski enthusiasts. They used to take the bus or the train to get to the slopes—until they heard about the Avis flat weekend rate. Then...bingo! They realized they could pick up a sparkling new Plymouth Satellite with ski racks on Friday noon, keep it until Monday 9 am and drive all the miles they wanted to for just $28 and gas! (That's 2½ days for the price of two). Now they're regular Avis renters. Shouldn't you be?

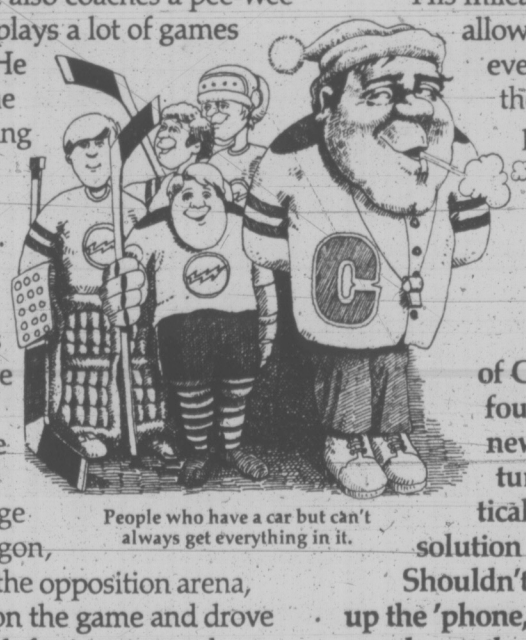
John Pinkham has a nice new car of his own...but he also coaches a pee-wee hockey team that plays a lot of games in distant arenas. He used to go to all the trouble of organizing car pools until he heard about the Avis flat daily rate. Then he realized that a roomy Avis station wagon was the answer because it was affordable!



People who have a car but can't always get everything in it.

Last game he packed the whole team in a big Dodge Polara Station Wagon, drove 36 miles to the opposition arena, won the game and drove back for just $18 and gas. Shouldn't you be scoring too?

Ron Hearnden is on the sales force of a big company. He has his own four-year-old compact which he used to drive on all his calls. Then he heard about the Avis flat daily rate with no mileage charge. Ron very quickly figured that driving a sparkling new Avis car on those long trips made a lot more sense than using the family car.

On his last trip, he made seven calls, logged 410 miles and kept the Plymouth Duster for two days for just $26 plus gas.

His mileage allowance even covered the best part of the rental.

Salvagers Ordered To Haul Away Logs

Sooke Residents Get Action from Gov't On Protests About Whiffin Spit Damage

'If this keeps up, the Spit will look like one huge gravel pit'

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The B.C. lands department has ordered salvage companies to remove all logs beached on publicly-owned Whiffin Spit at Sooke.

"We have been assured that the area will be cleaned up and no damage will be done to the vegetation on the unspoilt section of the spit," a government spokesmen said today.

The order follows complaints from residents that front-end loaders hauled stray logs from the sea on to a section of the spit containing the last bit of vegetation.

"Some damage was done," Howard Elder, Capital Regional Board director for Sooke, said. "The machines chewed up some vegetation growing on a thin layer of soil. If this keeps up the spit will look like one huge gravel pit."

Elder said the logs which broke away from a boom could easily have been floated a hundred yards to the west and beached on a part of the spit already damaged by logging operations.

He said the logs should be hauled back into the sea by cable and taken to another area to prevent further damage.

"If this had been private property, the operators would have asked the owner for permission to trespass," he noted.

The latest encroachment on the spit has revived demands that the spit be dedicated as a park. It is the only public waterfront property in the Sooke and Saseenos communities.

The scenic mile-long tongue of land dividing Sooke harbor from the Strait of Juan de Fuca was reserved several years ago as parkland by the lands department. This was done at the request of the B.C. parks branch which eventually plans to turn over the spit to the Capital regional District for inclusion in its regional park system.

However, despite the park reserve, industry has steadily encroached on the spit. First, foreshore leases were granted to two small contractors for booming.

Then in 1971, the department granted Island Tug and Barge a lease half-way down the spit for mooring chip barges and for log storage. This was opposed by the Capital Regional District on the grounds that spillage from the barges would pollute another section of the harbor and spoil the beaches.

A roadway constructed on the spit has destroyed all vegetation along half of the land area.

Charles I. Rushton, Tideview Road, says it will take 50 years for the vegetation to grow back on the west section of the spit.

"Now they are moving into another area," he said. "We are slowly destroying the spit. It is time some regulations were instututed to prevent further damage."

Deputy lands minister David Borthwick said he is surprised the Capital Regional District has not yet applied for the property.

"I don't think there would be any difficulty in turning over the area to the region," he said.

Talk, and Keep Talking, Trustees, Strikers Urged

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Greater Victoria teachers have called for "immediate and non-stop negotiations" to bring an end to the 13-day strike by school board maintenance workers.

"The teachers feel there's been no serious attempt to bring a quick end to this thing," Greater Victoria Teachers' Association president Bob Mitchell said today.

At a GVTA general meeting Wednesday night, Mitchell said more than 150 teachers agreed that "most undesirable learning conditions exist in classrooms, despite what (school board chairman) Peter Bunn has said."

They passed a motion instructing the GVTA executive "to urge both sides in the dispute to sit down immediately in non-stop negotiations until an agreement is reached."

"The executive was also instructed to consider with lawyers the matter of temperatures in the schools," Mitchell said.

The president said the motions came in response to Bunn's "repeated comments that everything is fine."

"I don't think the board has been in every school," Mitchell said.

"I visited every school last week and they're cold and dirty."

"We definitely feel there's been an interruption in the education of a good number of young people who can't work at home or without the help of teachers."

Hampered by Cold, Untidiness

Mitchell said the association had received a number of specific complaints from teachers in cases where classrooms were freezing in 40 and 50 degree temperatures and untidy conditions were preventing proper instruction.

He said he had heard of principals telling the school board that immediate cleaning was required if learning was to continue.

"The teachers are in the middle just like the students," Mitchell added.

"We want the trustees to take a more active role," he said, "a more personal interest in what's going on."

Bunn said today he felt the teachers were being "childish" and taking an "incredibly negative position."

He said negotiations will begin on Saturday because mediator Clark Gilmour was not available until then.

"How do they (the teachers) know we've made no serious attempt to negotiate?", Bunn said.

"We've had over 50 hours of negotiations since October."

Bunn said he disagreed that the trustees should take a more active role in negotiations.

"That's a professional job," he said, "there's no place for amateurs anymore when you're dealing with multi-millions of dollars."

Union spokesman Dick Proctor said CUPE is "prepared to sit there as long as necessary and bargain in good faith to reach agreement.

"We applaud the teachers and hope the school board management will listen too and bargain seriously."

Mitchell said he realized the teachers could take no action and their motions "were just to urge the two sides to sit down and end this strike."

City Joins Critics Of School Strikers

Without a word of discussion, Victoria city council today unanimously deplored the current strike of non-teaching staff in Greater Victoria schools.

The aldermen's eight hands shot up in approval of a resolution submitted by the mayors of Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Saanich and Victoria which deplored the strikers' "manipulation of third parties" and excessive pay demands.

Today's vote leaves councils of the four core municipalities split on the resolution.

On Monday, councils in Esquimalt and Saanich turned it down while Oak Bay council voted unanimously in favor of it.

At Esquimalt, the resolution was turned down by a 4-2 vote of aldermen who did not allow debate on it.

In Saanich, the subject produced the closest vote but was defeated 4-3.

Ald. Alan Newberry, an administrator in the Sooke School District, argued that while the strike is a "barbaric device," it was not grounds for interference at the political level.

60-year-old tree falls victim to garbage truck

CHERRY BLOSSOM TIME ENDS FOR OLD-TIMER

Rockland's biggest and oldest double-blooming Japanese cherry tree met an untimely end this moring at the hands of a garbage truck driver.

The 60-year-old tree stood at the corner of Rockland and Linden, gazing leaflessly into space at 7:50 this morning.

Suddenly, a 24,000-pound City of Victoria garbage department packer truck came out of the west along Rockland Ave. The driver, new to the route, didn't allow for the tree's overhanging branches as he skidded on ice at Linden.

The truck's box caught the tree out on a limb and cherry blossom time was over forever.

Nearby, apartment owner Lawrence Jones, 1171 Rockland, heard the tree's last agonized cry.

"It wakened me up," he said.

As he spoke, the chain saws were already disposing of the lifeless limbs of Rockland's first auto accident victim of 1973.

COMPANIES ACCUSED OF DUMPING

Two Lake Cowichan firms were charged in Duncan provincial court this morning with polluting Cowichan Lake.

Island Shake and Shingle Mill and Crown Zellerbach Ltd. have been charged with dumping debris into the lake. Both companies were remanded without plea until 9:30 a.m., Feb. 8.

The charges were laid by the federal department of fisheries in Duncan.

TREMOR PRODS SLEEPY HEADS

Some local residents got an extra gentle shake from bed this morning.

A "very small" earth tremor was recorded at 7.31 a.m. and Dr. William Milne, seismologist with the federal department of energy, mines and resources, said he thinks it was centred about three or four miles southeast of Oak Bay.

The tremor lasted about five seconds, he said, and recorded about 2½ on the Richter scale.

Public Hearing On Bay Village

Victoria city council will hold a public hearing on the Bay Village shopping centre proposal, and developer J. A. Mace will be left to pursue his suit for damages against the city in connection with delays over the embattled project.

The new move in the fight over the 29-storey high rise and supermarket proposal emerged from a secret meeting held by council directly after its regular meeting today.

Earlier, city solicitor T. P. O'Grady told council a Jan 12 letter from the Bay Village developers, which was to form the basis for the city signing a land-use contract and deed of variation, had since been "qualified" by the developers.

Ald. Mike Young, who signed the motion for the city to approve the long-disputed project, said the matter should be referred to a secret meeting "in the light of correspondence that has taken place in the last 48 hours."

James Bay Community Association announced Wednesday it had requested a provincial department of municipal affairs investigation of the shopping centre development and Victoria's handling of the matter.

Developer J. A. Mace seeks to construct a 29, possibly 24-storey tower and supermaket complex at the southwest corner of Simcoe and Menzies.

Earlier, council had approved in principle the rezoning of a site at the northwest corner of Simcoe and Menzies, directly across the street from the proposed Bay Village shopping centre.

Council agreed to draw up a bylaw amendment applied for by Yennadon Holdings Ltd., which would change the corner now occupied by aging corner stores from "high-density multiple dwelling" zone to "limited commercial" zone.

The new zoning would allow another shopping centre to be constructed at the sight.

Lone voice opposing the move was Ald. Percy Frampton, who criticized the Advisory Planning Commission for recommending the rezoning in the light of a recently published James Bay land use study drawn up by the city administration.

Frampton said he thought the study was "still in limbo" and should not be used as the basis for recommendation by the commission.

Recommendation of the Yennadon proposal was made by the Advisory Planning Commission once before on April 19, 1971.

Turn Down the Heat, Grab a Sweater

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The average Victorian will pay $202.40 to heat his house with oil this year, compared with $186.40 in 1972.

And the U.S. National Petroleum Council estimates the same amount of oil in 1985 could cost almost $500.

The $202.40 figure is based upon consumption of 800 gallons per year, which is the Victoria average, according to Bill Kissinger of Imperial Kissinger Oil Distributors.

★ ★ ★

Other sources indicated that large homes would cost about $300 to heat, based upon consumption of 1,200 gallons per year.

Kissinger said he felt the recent price increase to 25.3 cents per gallon, from 23.3 cents on Jan. 10 was justified in view of the fact oil prices had only gone from 18 to 25.3 cents in the past 19 years.

This is a 40 per cent increase, less than the rate of increase of wages.

There has been no decrease in the amount of oil purchased, despite the higher price.

"People still like to be comfortable."

But he is not looking forward to the massive price increases which the National Petroleum Council foresees for North America.

He said it was not at all an attractive prospect.

The National Petroleum Council is an oil industry association that provides background statistics for the U.S. government.

The council says oil prices will increase about 125 per cent in the next 12 years, as the supply diminishes in that country.

Costs of locating and transporting oil are growing rapidly and the oil has to be brought from further away, from the Arctic or North Sea instead of from Texas and California.

A 125 per cent increase in the heating oil bill would put oil at about 60 cents per gallon or $480 for the average Victoria household per year.

At that price, many Victorians might start turning down their thermostats and putting on a sweater.

While the U.S. prices will soar in response to a shortage, the Canadian prices will be pulled up at the same time despite a surplus of oil in this country.

An oil company spokesman said oil prices are determined on a world-wide basis because of the free market (no tariff) policy of major countries.

★ ★ ★

Therefore huge price increases in the U.S. would spill over into Canada regardless of the supply in this country, unless the federal government took some action forcing a two-price policy and tariff barriers.

Industry observers expect the free market system to continue — and prices to soar in Canada as well as the U.S.

A major unanswered question is whether consumers will reject the increases and sharply reduce oil consumption.

Some oil industry spokesmen hope it will, because the demand is growing faster than some companies can increase their supply.

CANADA'S NORTH, is depicted by the National Museums of Canada in the first of a series of exhibits to tour the country in 45-foot museumobiles. Lorraine Brown, 23, of Ottawa, is one of three guides who will conduct the tours which begin in Margaree Forks, N.S., Jan. 29.

National Museum Goes to the People

OTTAWA (CP) — If the people can't come to the museum, why not bring the museum to them?

The National Museums of Canada have put together the museumobile, a caravan of artifacts and displays to open in Margaree Forks, N.S., Jan. 29.

The theme of the first caravan is Canada-North. It covers the Arctic before the coming of European civilization.

The project, under the organization of Gerry Potoczny, is a pilot program. If all goes well with the first caravan, it is hoped there will be four on the road by next December, and up to 10 in operation by 1975-76.

The 45-foot trailer is arranged in two sections, one covering the Long Winter and the other, the High Summer.

The exhibits in each show the interaction of the animals in the North with their environment, with a special look at the technological adaptions used by the Eskimos.

The first of the museumobiles will tour some 30 Nova Scotian communities on a trip lasting about two months, with most of the stops to be made at schools.

Potoczny explained Nova Scotia was chosen for the debut because the organizers hoped to get the caravan out into smaller communities while avoiding Ontario and Quebec for the initial visits and because schools and museums are closely allied in Nova Scotia.

Caravan II will be a display of the post-European Arctic after the arrival of the white man, and Caravan III an exhibit of the art of the North.

Garlic: Love It or Leave It Alone

By EDITH VANOCUR
The Washington Post

Let's talk garlic. Garlic is firm when it is fresh. The outer skins should be pinkish. When mincing garlic, it is best to crush the clove first with the broad side of the knife. Then it won't slip away.

The qualities of cooked and uncooked garlic are dramatically different. Uncut garlic cooked in great quantity will have a less pungent flavor and odor than just half a raw clove crushed or cut. Either way, it is one of the most remarkable of all flavorings. For me, garlic salt and powder are poor substitutes.

To peel garlic, rub one or more cloves together in the palms of your hands. This will loosen the dry outer skins. To remove the odor of garlic from your hands or utensils, use cold water and, if necessary, a little baking soda.

As for the taste, love it or leave it alone.

APPETIZERS

ONION-GARLIC MUFFIN

(8 appetizers per muffin)

Cut or break an English muffin into two rounds. Spread the cut side of each round with butter and cover liberally with finely minced onion and garlic.

Sprinkle each round with poppy, fennel or caraway seeds. Season with salt and brown under the broiler. Cut each round into quarters and serve hot.

GARLIC CHICKEN CASSEROLE

(Serves 6)

Six whole (12 halves) small chicken breasts;

Cooking oil;

Salt and fresh pepper;

Two to 3 pounds eggplant, zucchini, or other squash, or a mixture of all;

Two large Spanish onions, sliced thinly;

Forty cloves of garlic, peeled but uncut;

Two cups dry white wine;

Two ounces brandy.

Dry the chicken pieces thoroughly, then brown them, a few at a time, in oil until golden on all sides. Season while cooking. Reserve.

Slice unpeeled eggplant or squash into rounds ½ inch thick or cut into strips and saute in the same pan, adding a little more oil if necessary. Again season while cooking and reserve.

Saute onion rings until golden and reserve.

Combine wine and brandy and deglaze the pan with this mixture.

To assemble: place vegetables and chicken pieces in alternating layers in a large flameproof casserole. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

Place some of the raw garlic between each layer. Correct seasoning as desired. Add wine mixture. Bring to a boil on top of the stove, cover well and bake without lifting the lid for one hour 40 minutes. Serve each person some of the stewed garlic. It is excellent spread on thin rye toast or French bread.

CHAPON

(For salad)

If you like the taste of garlic but don't want your guests to chew on a piece, take a piece of stale or twice heated bread and rub it well with one or two cut cloves of garlic. This can be placed in a bowl with the salad before it is dressed. I sometimes eat the chapon and leave the salad!

GARLIC SOUP

(Serves 4 to 6)

One quart chicken stock or water;

Two small onions, peeled and diced;

Six to 8 cloves garlic, washed but unpeeled;

Two small potatoes, peeled and diced;

Three sprigs parsley;

One rib of celery;

Salt and pepper;

Two tablespoons aioli (see recipe);

Grated parmesan cheese.

Simmer onions, garlic, potatoes, parsley and celery in stock or water until the vegetables are very soft, about 30 minutes. Press this mixture through a sieve. Discard the solids and measure the liquid, bring it up to one quart with additional stock or water.

Season and bring to the boiling point. Remove from heat and pour a little at a time over the aioli, beating hard all the time. When the mixture is no longer in danger of curdling, pour into the remaining soup, still beating all the time.

Do not boil the soup again or it will curdle, but it can be reheated. Serve with parmesan cheese.

BLENDER AIOLI

(For soup or poached fish)

One egg;

Three cloves garlic;

Dry mustard to taste;

Salt;

Juice from ½ lemon;

One cup of oil (olive, vegetable or mixture).

Break the egg into a blender. Add garlic, mustard, salt and lemon juice. Blend until no more particles of garlic are visible. Cover the top of the blender as much as possible, turn on high speed and pour in the oil in the slowest possible stream.

The resulting sauce, called aioli, may become too thick to absorb the whole cup of oil. Remaining oil may be beaten in by hand or the aioli may be left as is. Correct seasoning as desired with salt or lemon juice.

'Mom, I Don't Feel Very Good This Morning'

Probably the eight most discouraging words in the English language are, "Mom, I don't feel very good this morning."

Since I never feel anthing remotely resembling "good" in the morning, I must admit that my immediate reaction is to retort, "And I'll bet you'd feel a whole lot better if you'd memorized your nine-times table last night instead of all the words to 'American Pie.' Grab your socks, Goldbrick."

At 7:30 a.m., sympathy is not my long suit.

But the disquieting fact about children is that you can't tell for sure whether they are really ill unless they are considerate enough to do something decisive, like breaking out in a rash. "Not feeling good" is irritatingly ambiguous, heralding anything from mild constipation to bubonic plague. While I don't believe that the former is remotely contagious, with the latter he could conceivably wipe out the entire fifth grade.

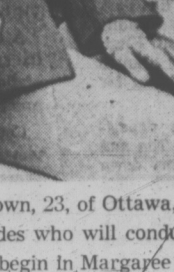
If you decide to keep him at home, by 10 a.m. you will discover that he has rallied enough to make a teepee out of the bedclothes, under which he will crouch and amuse himself by finger-painting the sheets.

During the course of the day you will make 22 trips upstairs. He will call you to scratch his left shoulder blade, time him with a stopwatch while he holds his breath, and to guess why the elephant painted his toenails red. (Which, in case you have spent the past twelve years alone in a cave, is so that the elephant could hide in the apple tree.)

By 1:30 he will have consumed three glasses of root beer, four peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, a dish of fudge ripple ice cream, and six boxes of cherry-flavored cough drops.

Around 3 p.m. you will realize that he is fairly blooming with health. You, however, have developed a stabbing pain in your left side and a nervous twitch.

Of course, the alternative plan of action would have been to send him to school. But to blithely send a child to school when he "doesn't feel very good" is to run the risk of his appendix bursting promptly at 10 a.m.



dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Please warn girls against hitch-hiking rides with men. Girls who get into a car with a strange man are just begging for trouble, but there is another side to it which few people consider.

My husband has a problem he has been trying to overcome for six years. It's a compulsion to expose himself to young women. He is not a rapist, he only does this to get a thrill from their reaction. He has never touched a girl, though many have encouraged him to go further. One of these girls reported him to the police and he is now facing the possibility of having to leave me and our three small children for a jail term on a charge of indecent exposure.

I am not condoning his actions, but he has finally faced his problem and is getting psychiatric treatment. He is a good husband and provider, and the children adore him and so do I. I plan to help him through this crisis, but I need help from everyone else of my sex.

Abby, please ask girls not to hitch-hike with strange men. They may be giving someone who is trying to go straight an opportunity to stray again, and the price is paid by his family.—Worried For My Husband

DEAR WORRIED: I agree, hitch-hiking is a risky business for all concerned. While I appreciate your understanding attitude and your empathy to your husband, he cannot shift the responsibility for his compulsion to the girls who are foolish enough to hitch-hike with him. He is doing the right thing in facing up to his problem and getting psychiatric treatment. But public sympathy is more on the side of the hitch-hikers than the man with such a problem.

DEAR ABBY: My husband sleeps all over the bed. He rolls on top of me or pushes me off the bed in his sleep. He sleeps so soundly it's impossible to wake him up. If I ask him to please roll over, he does — on me!

The next morning he doesn't remember a thing. All his life he's had a full-sized bed to himself, and he's accustomed to sleeping that way without giving anybody else a thought. We have been married for two years and I haven't had a good night's sleep yet.

We are buying new bedroom funiture and I want twin beds. He says he isn't ready for that yet, and he wants a king-sized bed. What is your advice. — Sleepytime Gal

DEAR GAL: Compromise. Get the twin beds with a single headboard. That way you'll each have your own mattress. And if you can get the kind that "swing" apart, by all means do. I have an idea you may need them.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

New four-bed ward at Gorge Hospital: Room with a view

Care for 300 Patients

Inside New Extended Care Facility There's Color, Space and Light

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

How do you take 300 people, most of them old, confined to bed or a wheelchair, put them in the same building and make their lives worth living?

Next Wednesday afternoon the public in Greater Victoria gets a chance to find out. At 2 p.m. Health Minister Dennis Cocke officially opens the new extended care wing at Gorge Road Hospital. Following the ceremony there will be public tours.

The four-storey addition behind the 100 bed rehabilitation hospital will be called the Margaret Christie wing, a tribute to the late city alderman who was among the founders of the original hospital.

Built and equipped for $4 million, it is for so-called extended care patients, mostly the elderly incapacitated, who will get their care for $1 a day under the provincial hospital insurance program.

It is the biggest thing to happen on the community hospital scene in over a decade and will ease the pressure on public and private hospitals which have been piling up waiting lists in recent years.

From the outside, the new building looks severe, with its streaked concrete and wood. Within, the contrast is striking—color, space and light.

Each of the four floors will house 75 patients but there is no impression of dormitory living. There are four-bed, two-bed and single bed wards off wide corridors with railings.

The rooms, with their picture windows, individual toilets, bright bedspreads, curtains and two-tone walls, are what you expect of a quality motel.

The view, through trees down to the Gorge waterway just a hundred feet away, is better than most motels can offer and there is a sundeck to get closer to it.

Each floor has its own color combination. At the centre is the nursing station and a roomy lounge—chesterfields and chairs in yellows, greens, blues, orange.

Big tiled washrooms, where sections can be screened off, have special equipment for bathing the incapacitated. The "century tub," for example, has a hydraulic chair which can lift a patient from a wheelchair into the water.

Many of the features of the new wing are designed to counter one of the biggest problems with old people needing chronic care—they sometimes tune the rest of the world out and seem literally to be bored to death.

There are two beauty salons, for example. And the lounges each have a stove and kitchen sink for those who might want to revive an interest in cooking.

Each floor has a physiotherapy section and among the 350 full and part-time staff, registered and practical nurses, kitchen, housekeeping and maintenance personnel, there will be a dozen "activation" aides, people to help patients make the most of the occupational and physiotherapy programs.

While many patients will have to have meals served in bed, there are dining rooms for those who don't and they will be encouraged to use them.

There will be two stores operated by the women's auxiliary of the hospital where patients and visitors can buy small items. Visiting hours will be 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

No time is going to be lost moving patients in. The first 55 will arrive next Thursday, the day after the official opening. After that, 10 will be admitted to each of the four floors every other day.

The wating list currently stands close to the capacity of 300 and it appears the new wing will be filled by the end of February.

One thing which is missing is the full complement of elevators. Only one of the three is in operation because of a protracted strike of elevator installers and maintenance men.

Because the new building stands on sloping land, three of the four floors can be entered from ground level so lack of elevators does not present a problem moving patients in.

It will hamper such services as food delivery, linen and medical supplies but hospital administrator Bill Morrison said the new wing will be able to operate.

Down Payment Key to Home Buying

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Money is the main thing you need when you're buying a house.

To figure out how much, be sure you understand all of the cost involved, not just the monthly mortgage payment.

Len Cassidy, president of the Toronto Real Estate Board, says you begin by managing the best down payment you can. He suggests you consider if you might borrow money from a relative or on an insurance policy at a low interest rate.

"Then you should know what you can afford to pay a month including interest, principal, taxes, heat, light and water. People coming from an apartment don't always know how much heating and water bills can be.

"Consider your car payments, life insurance, payments on furniture or an appliance. Consider when they'll be over and if you've got a raise coming.

"Then assume the largest mortgage you can afford, and pay it off in shrinking dollars."

If both partners are working, but the wife intends to quit, take her salary into account. She may be able to pay off a second mortgage so he can carry the first.

"The house should not become a burden."

Once you have an idea of what you can afford, Cassidy said you should choose your raal estate agent in the area in which you hope to buy because he'll know it well.

He urged you to choose him carefully, on the recommendation of friends or relatives, if possible.

When you are considering houses, he said location is the most important factor in the property itself, and conformity the next.

"Resale value is of prime importance, though you may not think so at the time.

"Know how the neighborhood is zoned, especially in new areas.

"All that really comes before what you think you want in the way of style and accommodation.

"Consider your proximity to employment. Sometimes the more expensive house closer to business is cheaper in the long run, partly because of resale."

Unless you're an expert, he said, don't worry too much about the structure. If you've chosen an honest agent, he'll tell you. If you're uncertain, pay for an expert's advice.

Decide where you're willing to make compromises in terms of function and layout, because you're almost sure to have to make some.

"They've always dreamed of a fireplace, but that's the least important thing."

If you're buying a new house, Cassidy said looking at a model and specifying what you want on that basis is best.

If it's a resale, he said you should get the extras in writing.

"You're wise to spell them right out, drape tracks, landscaping improvements, the whole works."

He said if you have chosen your agent well, you ought not to need a lawyer.

But you should be aware of tax situations. In a new house, three years' taxes are normally collected in two years, so you may have to pay more than you thought.

You will need to pay for a full tank of fuel, for fire insurance and for whatever changes you want to make to the house, even if it's only a can of paint. Mr. Cassidy said landscaping a new house can cost $1 500 or much more.

POLICY PROMISED ON WOMEN'S ROLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said this week he hoped to be able to state the government's position "shortly" on recommendations in the report of the royal commission on the status of women.

Replying to Grace MacInnis (NDP — Vancouver-Kingsway), Munro said he would consider a statement of priority for demands in the report.

MacInnis had asked if the government was considering legislation to bring in some of the recommendations.

LITTLE CIGARS CANCER RISK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government said Wednesday increasingly popular "little cigars," already under attack in the U.S. Senate, may be just as dangerous in risking cancer, heart disease and lung diseases as cigarettes.

"It is reasonable to conclude that smoking little cigars may result in health effects similar to those associated with smoking cigarettes if little cigars are smoked in amounts and with patterns of inhalation similar to those used by cigarette smokers," said Dr. Merlin K. Duval in a report to congress.

"Cigarette smokers who switch to cigars appear to be more likely to inhale cigar smoke than cigar smokers who have always smoked cigars, and cigarette smokers who switch to little cigars may be inclined to use them as they did cigarettes . . ."

Duval, who wrote the report before resigning recently as assistant secretary of health, education and welfare, said little cigars have comparable concentrations of carbon monoxide, hydrogen cyanide, acetaldehyde and other compounds found in cigarettes.

Some of these compounds have been indicted in previous reports by the U.S. surgeon general for the high rates of heart disease, cancer and emphysema among smokers. Duval, in the seventh government report on health and smoking, said the latest scientific evidence strengthens previous findings that "smoking is a major health problem in the United States."

Sen. Frank E. Moss announced Jan. 4 he will introduce legislation to include little cigars, including those marketed under the Winchester brand, in the year-old congressional ban on television and radio commercials for cigarettes.

Oldest Man Fathers 360

TEHRAN (AP) — Iran's oldest man, a 130-year-old farmer, had 360 children during 18 marriages during the last 115 years, the newspaper Ettelaat said. He has four children by his latest wife, whom he married eight years ago when she was 14, the newspaper said.

Arena Vote Likely Soon

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

DUNCAN — Cowichan taxpayers may soon vote on a million dollar combined swim pool and arena.

Ian Brown, chairman of the Inter-Club Council which represents all the service clubs in Duncan, said Wednesday this would be the first phase of a 10-year plan to construct a multi-recreational complex about three miles northwest of Duncan near the Old Lake Cowichan Road.

Brown said the Inter-Club Council has been working on the project for four months.

Brown emphasized that his group does not want to interfere with committees that have been investigating a pool and another arena in the area.

"All we would like to do is help co-ordinate it," he said. "It is feasible to build the pool and arena in one building. This would cut the costs and maintenance in half."

Brown said that taxpayers would really only be paying for half the project because of grants and other money available.

He pointed out that one of the main reasons his council is spearheading the drive is because the provincial government's offer of a one-third grant.

"With the grant plus Op-Rec's $90,000, set aside to go towards a pool, and possibly North Cowichan's centennial grant, we would only have to go to referendum for a maximum of $500,000."

Brown said the million dollar figure also includes the 20-acre site.

The second phase would be to build an 100'x120' auditorium, which could accommodate 30 indoor sports as well as day care, crisis, activity, counselling and visual arts centres.

BROWN
. . . 10-year plan

The third phase would be track and field and playing fields and other recreational facilities.

Brown said that before the project can get off the ground it has to be sanctioned by Duncan and North Cowichan councils.

Financing will probably be through the south-end of North Cowichan (residents in the north are already paying for an arena at Fuller Lake) Duncan and south of Duncan.

Brown said the six members of the Inter-Club Council (Gyro, Kinsmen, Kiwanis, Lions, Rotary and Jaycees) have joined forces "because we felt it was time to bring these organizations together to co-ordinate efforts to avoid duplication and to fill existing gaps."

Brown said that the clubs spent a total of $60,000 annually in various projects in the community.

Vote Feb. 17 on Fire Service

DUNCAN — Sahtlam residents will vote Feb. 17 on a referendum to establish a specified area to provide, operate and maintain fire protection service.

Cowichan Valley Regional board directors agreed Wednesday evening to hold the referendum so residents in Sahtlam, about four miles west of Duncan, can be taxed to maintain fire equipment.

Sahtlam director, Godfrey Ferguson, said the department needs $3,330 to maintain present equipment.

The department, which was formed three years ago, covers about 200 homes and plans to include Paldi in the fire protection district, which would mean 20 more.

Through community spirit and donations the district now has a two-storey fire hall, with the second floor serving as a community centre, and two pumper trucks and pick-up with a portable pump.

Residents submitted a petition with 84 names asking for the establishment of the fire protection area.

Ferguson stressed that in no way is the money raised for taxation going to be used for the community centre.

"I just don't want residents to misunderstand what the money is for," he said.

Ferguson said the actual fire department will still be administered by the firemen as it is done now and "we will just be the tax collectors."

COMMITTEE TO STUDY ACTIVITY CENTRE

DUNCAN — A committee to look into the feasibility of setting up an activity centre in the Duncan area was appointed at the regional board meeting Wednesday evening.

Read into the meeting were letters from Duncan and North Cowichan councils approving of the concept but saying the centre should be set up through the regional district.

Jack Hutton, director of the Mental Health Centre here, emphasized the need for the centre to council.

"I am looking at it from the mental health point of view while others would think of it socially," Hutton told directors.

Hutton, who has been involved in the successful activity centre in Lake Cowichan, said the centre would serve people of all ages.

This could be through programs involving handicrafts, discussion groups, social opportunities and many kinds of therapeutic programming for mentally and physically handicapped persons.

Hutton said the centre should be set up for daytime programming and aimed mainly at people who are unemployed, bored housewives and young mothers.

Director John Cannon, who was appointed to the committee along with directors Jev Tothill, Godfrey Ferguson and Ken Paskin, said, "I think we should look into setting one up because it will fill a very big void."

HOCKEY JAMBOREE ON SUNDAY

LAKE COWICHAN — The Lake Cowichan and District Minor Hockey Association is sponsoring its third annual hockey jamboree Sunday.

More than 400 local youths will compete in 17 games starting at 8 a.m. running through to 10:30 p.m.

The jamboree raises money to help pay the $8,000 it costs annually for ice-time and other expenses incurred to keep minor hockey going, said president Ted Forrest.

SEARCH ENDED FOR AIRCRAFT

ALERT BAY (CP) — The search was discontinued Wednesday night for a plane with two men aboard missing since Friday off the north coast of Vancouver Island.

An RCMP spokesman said late Wednesday that the Drury Inlet area, where two floats from the single-engine Harrison Airways Ltd. plane were found Sunday, had been thoroughly covered by air and by water without further trace of the missing plane.

Pilot Dale Rockwell of Delta, and his passenger David Kinne of Langdale, were en route to a remote logging camp.

Sixth Operation Slated For Paralyzed Wallace

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Aides said Gov. George Wallace would enter the University of Alabama medical centre at Birmingham today for "elective" urinary tract surgery.

The operation is needed to ease urinary drainage hampered by spinal cord surgery performed following the assassination attempt on Wallace at Laurel, Md., last May.

It will be Wallace's sixth operation since he was partially paralyzed in the shooting.

NEW YORK — Angello Dellacroce, reputed gangland "underboss" to "Boss of Bosses" Carlo Gambino, was convicted Wednesday of evading $68,000 in federal income taxes in 1968.

An eight-man, four-woman federal court jury found the 59-year-old Dellacroce guilty after a three week trial. He was charged with evading taxes through hidden stock deals and faces up to 15 years in prison and fines of up to $25,000.

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Anne Hamilton Spalding, mother of actor George Hamilton, has been arrested on a charge of destroying a sand dune in front of her beach front home.

"They're making a test case out of me, and I don't like it," said Mrs. Spalding, who will be arraigned Friday in municipal court.

Mrs. Spalding moved into a six-bedroom home 18 months ago. Her gardner, Lawrence Wilson, was arrested last December after he allegedly bulldozed away a 2½-foot-high sand dune in front of the home to improve the ocean view.

WACO, Tex. — District Judge Carl C. Anderson sentenced a convicted murderer to 101 years in prison Wednesday, but told the man he would have preferred the sentence was death in the Texas electric chair.

"If I had the right I would see that you would never be released in society again," Anderson said. "The state does not give me the authority to pronounce the sentence on you that I would like to."

Throughout the lecture, the convicted man, John E. Swift, 24, gazed at the ceiling in the courtroom, apparently trying to ignore what Anderson was saying.

Swift was convicted earlier in the day of the murder of Hearne, Tex., banker H. C. Kelly. The jury deliberated only 30 minutes.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col. — Arstist Thomas A. Reaney, a nationally-known portrait and landscape painter, died at a hospital here Wednesday after a lengthy illness. He was 56.

NEW YORK — Former Beatle John Lennon has filed a counterclaim in Manhattan Supreme Court accusing a British music publishing firm and its American subsidiary of an alleged conspiracy that defrauded him of about $9 million on royalties.

The counterclaim, made public Wednesday, was in answer to a suit filed last November by Northern Songs Ltd. of Great Britain and Maclen Music Inc. of Manhattan for $1,050,000 against Lennon, his wife, Yoko Ono, and her firm, the Ono Music Co., established in New York.

LONDON — The man behind the banning of a film on American pop artist Andy Warhol said Wednesday he is planning legal action against the BBC.

Televison and sports commentator Ross McWhirter claimed the BBC was in contempt of court for showing clips Tuesday night from two films by Warhol.

The television film on Warhol was banned last week after McWirter took out a two-week injunction because he felt that sex scenes in it breached laws on standards of decency on television.

Ex-PoW Remembers Good Deed

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Thirty-two years ago, Vincent (Paddy) Byrne of London was in a Nazi prisoner-of-war camp near Frankfurt, suffering wounds in both shoulders.

"It was dreary there—dark and dreary for me—and then came a parcel," Byrne recalls. "It was the first sunshine that had come into my life in months."

The tiny tin of cookies and candy from the St. Petersburg, Fla., Red Cross remained only a memory for the former RAF man until last week, when his wife spotted a story in The Times of London.

It told of Howard Thomas of St. Petersburg, who says he plans to divorce his dying wife so she will be entitled to state aid to pay nursing home costs he cannot afford.

Ruth Thomas, 45, who married Thomas at the age of 13 and bore him six children, is dying of multiple sclerosis.

On Wednesday it was disclosed that Byrne had donated to a bank trust fund set up for Mrs. Thomas three vacant lots he had purchased in nearby Gulfport during a visit to St. Petersburg six years ago.

Byrne, who describes himself now as a gentleman farmer, says he and his wife were familiar with the St. Petersburg area even before the Red Cross parcel arrived at Stalag Luft 3 so many years ago.

Byrne's brother, the late Francis Joseph Byrne, was a real estate man here and the uncle of Dr. Joseph Byrne, a St. Petersburg surgeon.

"I could not believe it," Mrs Byrne said of her reaction to the newspaper account. "I told my husband it is not possible that this could happen to someone in St. Petersburg, where everyone is so kind and gracious. It was, to us, a sordid story."

The reported value of the lots, about $20,000, will about equal the outstanding medical debts incurred in Mrs. Thomas's treatment.

Booze Big Seller in North

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Alcohol, acknowledged by the government as the evil behind the north's mushrooming social problems, still is the fastest selling item in the Northwest Territories.

Territorial council was told Tuesday that the N.W.T. liquor control system achieved a record profit in 1972. It was the 10th consecutive record set by the system.

Gross government profits on alcohol sales were $3.1 million, or 47.7 per cent of total sales of $6.5 million, said a control system report. Sales increased 16 per cent over 1971.

A breakdown showed $3.1 million in liquor sales, $2.7 million in beer, and wine sales of $565,000.

Council has estimated that 85 per cent of the prisoners at Yellowknife Correctional Institute serve their terms of alcohol-related offences.

"If you stop selling liquor, the Mounties can all go home and the prisons will stand empty" said Councillor Bryan Pearson.

The northern health service repeatedly reported that alcohol abuse is the cause of the majority of violent and accidental deaths, and a major factor in the north's high infant mortality rate.

Mr. Justice William Moor of the Territorial Supreme Court has estimated that 80 per cent of the cases he deals with are the result of alcohol abuse.

Council estimates that liquor profits this year will surpass $3.7 million, $50,000 more than fuel oil taxes, $1 million more than government housing rentals and almost $2 million more than recoveries from the federal government for maintenance of the Mackenzie highway system.

The budget for the government's alcohol education program this year has been reduced to $141,000 from $172,000.

Local Industry Aided

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Transit Commission decided Tuesday to buy Ontario-made buses in an effort to aid provincial employment although it will cost $288,015 more than if they were purchased from a Winnipeg company.

The commission voted to buy 115 buses at a cost of $5.4-million. All but 10 of the buses will be built at London's General Motors of Canada Ltd. plant.

A. T. C. McNab, deputy minister of transportation, said preference should be given to Ontario-made buses because of the "serious" unemployment situation in the province.

The other 10 buses will be bought from Flyer Industries Ltd. of Winnipeg.

West Behind CP Air in Route Fights

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A determined drive behind the scenes by the government-owned Air Canada to invade the Pacific, and other regions assigned by government policy to the privately owned Canadian Pacific Air, has aroused the ire and opposition of several western members of parliament.

The struggle going on quietly but strenuously between the two Canadian air carriers for new routes, has intensified in recent weeks, it was learned Wednesday from informed government sources.

The decision still has to be made by the cabinet as to which Canadian carrier will get the right to fly into China. CP Air claims it is entitled to the China route but Air Canada is making a determined drive to get the right to launch the Canadian commercial air service between Canada and China.

The Canadian government has obtained the right for a Canadian air carrier to fly to Milan, Italy. This is in return for allowing Alitalia the right to serve Toronto in addition to its flights to Montreal.

CP Air expects to get the right to fly to Milan as "southern Europe" was assigned to it under federal government policy.

However Air Canada wants to get the right to fly into Milan in northern Italy. CP Air is fighting against any government move to open up Milan to Air Canada on the grounds that this would be a serious invasion of the spheres it was assigned under government policy, and would drastically reduce the revenues of both airlines.

MPs from British Columbia, and some other western members, are inclined to side with CP Air in its struggle against encroachment on its spheres of operation by the government owned airline.

Senator Arthur Laing, former cabinet minister, who was elevated to the senate when the last parliament was dissolved, is an outspoken advocate of CP Air. The privately owned airline has its headquarters in Vancouver.

"We have two flag carriers in Canada," he said today. "Historically they have each been assigned a sphere for operations or a sphere of influence around the world, which must not be tampered with in any way."

He said CP Air has the biggest single payroll in British Columbia and is the largest single industry in that west coast province. When the federal cabinet starts tampering with the spheres of operation for CP Air it is a blow to the west, the senator warned.

Western MP's have heard that Yves Pratte, the chairman of Air Canada and Transport Minister Jean Marchand are close friends. As a result they view with suspicion reports emanating from Air Canada that suggest it is expecting to move into areas now reserved by CP Air.

Pratte recently gave an interview in which he said that the federal government decision as to which of the two Canadian carriers will serve Milan, the northern Italian centre is a question that is fundamental "to the future of this institution Air Canada."

MPs from the west have never forgotten that Air Canada with its headquarters now based in Montreal moved its operations from Winnipeg to the Quebec metropolis. The final shift of the overhaul maintenance base from Winnipeg to Montreal was a blow to the Manitoba city that it will take a long time forgetting.

"That was a struggle for jobs between the west and Quebec," said Senator Laing "and Montreal won."

The federal government air policy divides up the globe, excluding Africa, into spheres of influence for each of the two Canadian air carriers.

The policy gives northern Europe, and the Caribbean to Air Canada.

CP Air was assigned southern Europe, part of Latin America and the Far East. CP Air was also granted the right ton continue to fly into Amsterdam.

Air Canada officials feel they got the "short end of the stick" in this division of the world under the government's air policy.

The battle is on between the two carriers and strenuous lobbying is going on behind the scenes.

TEN COMMANDMENTS EVERY DAY: BILLY

WASHINGTON (WP) — Billy Graham, one of three spiritual leaders presiding at a White House worship service, called for a daily reading in U.S. classrooms of the 10 Commandments.

He told a crowd of 300 assembled with President and Mrs. Nixon in the East Room, that "our young people founder because they are uncertain as to what is right and wrong."

"Who can improve on the 10 Commandments?" Graham asked. "I would like our religious leaders to unite and say that we would like to have the 10 Commandments read in every classroom every day."

Later, Chief Justice Warren Burger, asked if Graham's proposal might raise constitutional questions, said: "At this time it would."

Haiphong Mines Major Threat

By MURREY MARDER
Washington Post

HAIPHONG — North Vietnam's major port, with its lifeline to the sea mined with concealed American weaponry, awaits the Saturday cease-fire that holds special hazards even when the shooting stops.

It will take months and maybe years to locate and deactivate all the thousands of underwater explosives planted in the harbor approaches, rivers and canals of this area, according to the mayor of this bruised city.

The United States having planted the mines, Mayor Le Duc Thinh said, "I think it is also the responsibility of the Americans to remove them.

"We of course hope to sweep them away as soon as we can," the mayor said, but he stressed "I want to emphasize the moral responsibility of the American side."

Mayor Thinh said that he and other municipal and military officials in the Haiphong region do not know what has been said in the secret Paris talks about the mine removal task ahead. But he said, "the quantity of mines is quite great." He recalled that for years after the Second World War unfound mines continued to endanger shipping off many coasts, especially in heavily mined European waters.

Mining technology has become considerably more sophisticated since then, the mayor noted. If the claim that the United States has the most modern technology for such operations, he added, "I think it will take much longer" to remove the mines from North Vietnam's waters.

Mayor Thinh said that "not only the entrance to the harbor has been mined, but mines have been placed in all the rivers.

"Some mines are as close as three to five miles to the harbor," he said. "Mostly, they place the mines at night, but in some cases during the day. We have organized a sentry system, but of course we couldn't watch all the minelaying planes," he said. "From May 9, they continuously placed mines in our waters."

Soon after the first mines were dropped, he said, "70 or 80 of them exploded without anyone touching them, about two miles from the coastal resort of Doson in a period of just one hour."

The mayor said he did not know if the mines exploded because they were defective or what caused them to explode.

In at least three incidents, he said, fishing boats "touched them" and the mines exploded, blowing up boats and fishermen.

He said he couldn't provide casualty totals, but in one case "two boats were destroyed and 10 people died" and in the Cathai area, "there were 10 killed fishing."

The mayor was asked if there have been casualties among personnel attempting to sweep or deactivate the mines. He replied, "there are a few cases because it is necessary for us to paralyze the mines. We have done some. How we did it, excuse me, I cannot tell you. "If the Americans think that we have the means to paralyze the mines, they will continue to place them," he said.

FIRST U.S. CASUALTY FELL 11 YEARS AGO

SAIGON (UPI) — Eleven years and 31 days ago, on a dusty road in the hamlet of Duc Hoa near Saigon, the United States suffered its first Vietnam combat loss.

U.S. Army Spec. 4 Tom Davis of Livingston, Tenn., was shot dead by the Viet Cong. He was an adviser to a South Vietnamese unit and his death came 18 days after President John F. Kennedy authorized U.S. troops to accompany the South Vietnamese into combat.

President Lyndon B. Johnson later said Davis was "the first American to fall in defence of our freedom in Vietnam."

ONTARIO, B.C. DRAW MOST OLD SOLDIERS

OTTAWA (CP) — Old soldiers were once said to fade away, but in Canada they seem to prefer retiring to Ontario or British Columbia.

Information provided by the Canadian Forces indicates that of the 38,384 former Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen now retired, 15,680 live in Ontario and 8,033 in British Columbia.

The figures were provided in response to a question by David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North). The next most popular provinces for retired armed forces personnel are Nova Scotia, Quebec and Alberta.

Another question from Orlikow elicited figures to show that corporals and sergeants comprise the largest groups in the active services — 29,584 and 10,250 respectively.

NDP Backs UIC Advance

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government Wednesday was assured of New Democratic backing for a bill to remove the ceiling from the unemployment insurance fund, ensuring that benefits will continue to be paid.

But Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre), in giving that assurance in the Commons, said the Liberals will not have NDP support for another measure designed to rectify abuses to the scheme by individuals and to tighten up qualifications for benefits.

Mr. Knowles spoke after G. W. Baldwin (Peace River), Conservative House leader, attacked the bill that would remove an $800-million ceiling on advances the government can make to the unemployment insurance program and provide for repayment to the treasury of two advances made by cabinet order last year.

Manpower Minister Robert Andras earlier said it is urgent that the bill be considered because the Unemployment Insurance Commission only has enough money to carry it to about Feb. 7.

The bill amends existing legislation under which the government is entitled to advance up to $800 million to the UIC to cover anticipated employer-employee payments to the scheme.

Last year the cabinet, in an action the Conservatives say was illegal, approved two orders under which the UIC received advances of $454 million because the $800-million ceiling was being exceeded.

Mr. Baldwin said only Parliament has the right to make changes in legislation it has passed, and the government deceived the public by not bringing the shortage before Parliament prior to the Oct. 30 federal election.

Mr. Baldwin introduced an amendment under which the Commons would say that it accepts the need to provide unemployment insurance benefits but that the government's manner of doing it is not acceptable.

The fate of the amendment became known immediately when Mr. Knowles joined government spokesmen in opposing it.

Mr. Andras said the government may have erred in its estimating but not in its action to seek to protect the victims of unemployment, and Mr. Knowles basically agreed with that.

He said non-payment of benefits would have been more serious than government breaking the law "because of the backlash against unemployment insurance which has developed during the election period.

Hospital Transfer Sought

Provincial and federal governments will make "a major effort" this year to transfer Veterans Hospital to the community, the chairman of the Capital Regional Hospital Board said Wednesday.

Art Young told board members the matter had been discussed the day before with Health Minister Dennis Cocke. Both governments regard assurance that veterans will have access to hospital care as a primary consideration in negotiations, he added.

Turning of the 270-bed hospital alongside Royal Jubilee Hospital from the veterans affairs department to the province has been a proposal debated sporadically in recent years.

It is currently an important consideration because it has a bearing on the number of new hospital beds the community needs. A $22.5 million hospital building referendum is going before regional ratepayers in March.

In other business, appointment of regional directors to the executive committee was approved. They are Young, Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford, Central Saanich Mayor Archie Galbraith, Saanich Aldermen Edith Gunning and Les Passmore, Victoria Ald. Alf Hood, directors Earl Pallister from Langford and Marc Holmes from Salt Spring Island.

Bank Swindled?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police are investigating a report several branches of the Royal Bank were swindled out of about $35,000 last month. It is believed several banks received information from an out-of-town bank that a certain man would be requesting money from the banks and that his credit was good.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Antabuse Can Cause Eye Trouble

The American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology just sent out a release to warn doctors about the drug Antabuse (disulfiram). This drug, which was designed to help alcoholics to stop drinking because when taken in combination with alcohol it causes unpleasant reactions, such as nausea, vomiting, and shortness of breath, has now been found to cause blurry vision.

Two Baltimore doctors, Alan L. Norton and Frank B. Walsh, of Johns Hopkins learned of reports from France of eye problems due to the drug, after they had had a patient who complained of blurry vision after taking the drug for his drinking problem.

The doctors immediately advised the patient to stop the medicine for a while. A month later, his vision was normal again. Apparently, what happens is that the medicine irritates the optic nerve.

The problem of unwanted side effects to drugs is one that we doctors are facing constantly and is one of the most frustrating for our big drug houses.

AN UNUSUAL NEW TREATMENT FOR BEDSORES

As many people know, one of the most distressing problems that can come to persons who must lie in bed for months and months, perhaps because they are paralyzed and cannot roll over, or cannot easily move around for some reason, is the coming of bed sores, which can get very nasty and sometimes can get very nasty and sometimes even be fatal.

Now I read, in a release from the American Medical Association, that Dr. James W. Barnes, Jr., of the Glenn Dale Hospital in Glenn Dale, Md. has found a simple and, in almost 80 per cent of cases, effective way of healing bed sores, or "severe decutitus ulcers," as we doctors call them: with plain sugar, such as one can buy at a supermarket.

Dr. Barnes has been using this method for five years, and at a recent American Medical Association (AMA) meeting, he said, "I tried the sugar treatment out of sheer frustration, after other methods proved unsatisfactory. The use of sugar is not new, but the way we apply it is: We pack the ulcer very full and use air-tight dressings."

1—NORTH SAANICH. Everything about this unique property is appealing. The lines and design of the cedar siding house are most eye pleasing and are in harmony with its acre size, beautifully treed lot. The profile of the land to it's 166 foot seafrontage provides sufficient slope so that a panoramic view of Satellite Channel is afforded from most rooms of the house. The year old Abbott-built home is charming throughout, from it's antique brickwork in the kitchen, it's three graciously appointed suites, separate from one another, yet grouped in a practical manner around the generously proportioned living area. The price is a most realistic $88,750. For appointment to view call:

C-FAX TAPING OFFENDS CITY

Radio station C-FAX got a slap on the wrist from Victoria city council today for having its city hall reporter record the entire proceedings of its inaugural meeting earlier this month.

Mayor Peter Pollen said he thought alleged instructions from a radio station official that the proceedings be recorded showed a "gross lack of courtesy" which he personally found distasteful.

City Solicitor T. P. O'Grady said there was no regulation which prevented the action.

"It's a problem of decorum," he said.

Council did not make any formal ruling on the matter.

"I think we can go on record as considering this poor parliamentary procedure," the mayor said.

Ald. Percy Frampton said he could understand council's concern but he could not see anything wrong.

"You can record the meeting in shorthand or on tape. It doesn't seem to make much difference," he said.

Ald. Tom Christie said he wanted to know if such recording was allowed and whether permission was asked.

The mayor said he believed the reporter was advised to make his tape by his employer.

"I certainly was not consulted. I'd say this was a violation of the privilege of council," he said.

Life For Pusher

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Court Judge Murray Hyde sentenced a confirmed drug trafficker Wednesday to life imprisonment, the first time such a sentence has been passed at the provincial court level.

Life sentences for drug trafficking have been imposed twice in Vancouver before, but at the county court level.

Hyde told Walter Orlovitch, 37, that previous terms of imprisonment for drug trafficking "apparently acted as no deterrent to you, and I must impose a sentence to clearly indicate to others what the court means.

"The most important part of sentencing is for the protection of society, and society must be protected from you.

"Deterrent is second in my mind, and your possible rehabilitation is third and I stress third," said Hyde.

The judge convicted Orlovitch in November of two counts of trafficking in heroin.

Court was told Orlovitch had previously been sentenced three times to seven-year jail terms since 1952 for trafficking in drugs.

"It is a clear indication to this court that you do not wish to change your pattern of life," said Hyde. "You are a determined unrepentant trafficker in heroin."

Watergate Defence Rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Judge John Sirica told lawyers for defendants in the Watergate political espionage trial they were "ridiculous" when they argued their clients broke into Democratic national headquarters to protect President Nixon.

Sirica dressed down the attorneys Wednesday while rejecting the request of Watergate defendant James McCord Jr. that he be allowed to build his defence around the argument that he spied on the Democrats to guard Nixon and other Republican officials from harm.

At the close of Wednesday's proceedings, Sirica ordered the jury from the District of Columbia courtroom and called the lawyers before the bench. The black-robed judge launched into a lecture, saying it was his opinion that McCord, a former CIA and FBI operative, should have notified the proper authorities if he feared for the safety of Republican officials.

"I happen to be a Republican, but any decent American — Republican or Democrat deplores this kind of conduct and you know it as well as anybody else."

McCord's lawyer, Gerald Alch of Boston, stunned by Sirica's verbal barrage, nonetheless urged him to allow presentation of the so'called "defence of duress."

"I don't think you're entitled to this defence in this case," Sirica said firmly. "That's the ruling of this court."

Design Panel Rejects Plan For Outlet

Oak Bay's design panel has called a developer's proposals for a retail outlet at St. Patrick and Central unsuitable and recommended that they be changed.

Dane Developments Ltd. have submitted plans to build a two-storey building on St. Patrick. The building would contain two stores on the main floor and an apartment on the floor above.

The panel of architects' report was considered by council's lands and buildings committee today.

It stated, "We would recommend that a further study be requested in order that a more satisfactory end result be achieved for this particular area."

The company had originally asked to have an adjacent lot rezoned for retail from single-family dwelling in order to build on the two lots.

The committee had rejected this.

Today municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White suggested that this might be a better alternative, adding that design could be controlled if a land-use contract was drawn up between the developer and the municipality.

Noting that residents, generally, appeared opposed to spot zoning for this kind of development, Ald. Brian Smith said people were more prepared to live with "confined unpleasantness."

The committee will ask the developer to come up with a more suitable plan.

Sweeps Charges Get No Comment

DUBLIN (CP) — An Irish newspaper's allegations that only a tiny fraction of Irish hospitals sweepstakes funds ever reach the hospitals have been studied with cold silence by the sweeps directors.

A spokesman said the story, published by the Sunday Independent, is still under consideration by the directors and there would be no immediate comment.

The article was based on what the paper described as interviews with police across Canada and with United States postal officials.

From these "it seems clear that more than 90 per cent of the value of tickets entered in each sweepstakes draw is being written off, mainly to expenses, at a rate of more than £150,000 ($335,000) a week," the Sunday Independent said.

The article, by reporter Joe MacAnthony, also said:

"When the sweep expenses today — well over 50 per cent — are added to the prize funds and taxes, there seems no doubt that less than 10 per cent is then left over for the hospitals in whose name the scheme is being run."

IRELAND SHORTCHANGED

The story said police officers in Canada "believe that more than a third of the money raised in Montreal, Toronto and other cities never finds its way back to Ireland."

In explaining this, the article said the sweep "gives away 16 2-3 per cent on all tickets sold, in the form of free tickets."

"Most of these tickets are sold in Canada but the money never returns to the sweep," it continued.

"In addition there are main distributors and sub-distributors who receive payment for selling tickets at a rate which the police believe is, at the very least, $3 per book of 12."

The Sunday Independent story mentioned no Canadian police authorities by name.

The circumstances in which tickets were sold in Canada "made Canadian policemen critical of the Irish commissioner of police for allowing his title to be associated with the scheme, as each ticket states that the draw is held under his superivision," the article said.

It quoted what it called the head of the Toronto morality squad as saying:

"After all, we know here that the bulk of the money is not going where it should be going."

PART OF THE IRISH LIFE

All this is by no means the first criticism of the sweepstakes, which have been part of Irish life for more than 40 years.

Irish hospitals which benefit from money originating in ticket sales are represented in a directing group called the Associated Hospitals Committee.

But detailed management of the sweeps is in the hands of a fee-charging company known as Hospitals' Trust 1940 Ltd.

Questioned about the fee in 1968, company officials said it was slightly more than two per cent of total receipts on individual sweeps. Total expenses at that time took 22 per cent of receipts, they said.

In publishing its article about the operation, The Sunday Independent suggested in an editorial that an alternative method can be found for reducing health costs in Ireland such as lotteries.

Tax advantages for all is only one of the benefits of this combined program.

National Trust's Deferred Profit Sharing Plan and Registered Retirement Savings Plans for small businesses and executive groups.

The new Income Tax Act provides unusual opportunities for employers and employees alike to obtain maximum tax advantages. And a combination of National Trust's Deferred Profit Sharing Plan, operated by the employer, and voluntary Registered Retirement Savings Plans, paid for by employees, can mean total tax exempt contributions up to $6,500 annually per employee.

Incentive to work

With National Trust's deferred profit sharing plan there is also a strong incentive to work. Work for better performance and better profits, because it ensures that employees have a stake in both. And contributions can be directly related to the profit performance of the business.

How the 'combined' plans work

The deferred profit sharing plan provides for the accumulation and investment of employer contributions on the employee's behalf. At the same time, the employee can voluntarily supplement his employer benefits by participating in a Registered Retirement Savings Plan.

A flexible programme

The deferred profit sharing plan is a sensible alternative to employee pension arrangements for small businesses. With the National Trust Plan the employer determines who is to participate as well as the method of allocating contributions. The contribution amounts are based on a formula established by the employer, setting out the percentage of profits to be allocated.

The employee determines the amount he wishes to contribute to his RRSP.

Tax advantages

All employer plan contributions, investment gains and earnings of the trust fund are tax exempt, the employee being taxed on amounts withdrawn. And, at the time of withdrawal, the employee has important options available which may include tax free transfers to his Registered Retirement Savings Plan.

Professional management and total administration

National Trust provides professional investment management of the deferred profit sharing trust fund through participation in its 'pooled' stock, bond and mortgage funds which show an impressive record of investment performance. The plans are handled in every phase by experienced and expert administrative staff. The reporting and accounting phases are automatically taken care of, which relieves the businessman of day-to-day handling. At the same time, National provides the administrative facilities for the employees' own registered retirement savings plans.

Tax advantages for all is just one of the benefits. National Trust's Deferred Profit Sharing Plan in combination with a Registered Retirement Savings Plan represents an excellent way to contribute to an employee's future security while providing strong motivation for work performance and employee interest.

Light Grey Insect Found on Cactus

While sitting in the winter sunshine waiting for column inspiration, I noticed small greyish white spots on a spring flowering cactus in the east window.

Closer inspection reveals a light grey insect about an eighth of an inch long by one-sixteenth. With a hand lens many tiny feet are plainly visible.

Since the creature is not a fast mover, there is no panic treatment necessary, though if left to themselves a few can spoil a house plant in a week or two.

These grey aphides emerge from small white cottony masses which can also be found by searching around the house plants. They suck juices from areas of new growth. Look for them at junction points where sections of phyllodes, or leaf-like structures grow out of one another on Easter flowering cacti, Christmas flowering cacti, the eipphyllums and phyllocacti.

★ ★ ★

If left unchecked, the insects will fasten themselves to flower bud stems as the latter are formed. Sucking the juices and causing the cells to collapse is the obvious cause of the ultimate dropping of the buds before the flowers have a chance to develop.

Leaves, or sections, will drop from the same cause—loss of vital juices and cell collapse.

The remedy is to remove each insect with a toothpick. They are soft bodied, requiring the protection of the cottony mass while developing to the moving stage. Remove both the cotton-like masses and whatever insects you can see. Check thoroughly in four or five days for smaller aphides which have deveoped.

On the Chinese Jade plant (Crassula argentea) these insects may be found in the flower bud clusters, preventing them from opening; and at the base of leaf stems, causing leaves to drop while still succulent and green.

★ ★ ★

Another plant I have found suffering from these aphides is Hoya carnosa, the Wax-plant On the backs of the thick leaves, the cotton mass protection hides the baby insects intil they are ready to move slowly to a feeding point. Flower buds are borne in thick clusters and it is among them the grey insects are likely to hide.

Sometimes the dropping of the buds is the first sign you notice. Remove them with the toothpick; there's no need to use any other method in the home.

When it is possible to wash down pot plants with a gentle hosing, as in a greenhouse or conservatory, this insect is not nearly so troublesome. Perhaps too, the higher humidity has something to do with its less frequent appearance under those conditions.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal arose in a rubber-bridge tournament held in Las Vegas last year, our South declarer arrived at an excellent game contract. As will be observed, the defence was super-perfect, and the contract was defeated. In the post-mortem analysis, it was revealed that the contract could have been made if declarer had come up with a ridiculous play.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

♣ K 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♣.

Upon winning the opening lead with his ace of clubs, East shifted to the three spades. West won this lead with his ace, and returned the spade jack. South played low from dummy, with the hope that the jack would win the trick. But East came up with a fine play: he overtook the jack with his king.

From East's position, he knew that he was making the right play, for he had asked himself the question: "Why didn't declarer cover the jack with dummy's queen, thereby making winners out of dummy's remaining spades?" The answer suggested itself: declarer had no other losers in his hand, and didn't need any tricks in the spade suit.

So East came to the proper conclusion that the defenders' sole hope for the setting trick rested in obtaining a trump trick. After winning trick three with his spade king, East led his remaining spade.

There being no spades remaining in the defenders' hands, declarer quite naturally ruffed this trick with his jack, West discarding a diamond. Next came a trump to dummy's ace, after which the trump queen was cashed. When West failed to follow suit to the second trump lead, declarer was down, since East had a sure trump winner.

Declarer made the right play when he ruffed the third spade lead with the jack. Had the five outstanding trumps been divided normally (3-2), he would have avoided the loss of a trump trick.

Of course; if declarer had been clairvoyant, he would have ruffed with the three-spot, which would have won the trick, since all West had was the singleton deuce. But this just couldn't have been the correct play.

Short Week

EDMONTON (CP) — A three-day work week, the first involving a major industrial operation in Alberta, began Tuesday for 90 employees at Gulf Oil Canada's Edmonton refinery.

Gulf will also introduce three 12-hour shifts on a rotating nine-week cycle for 20 workers at its Nevis plant, 30 miles east of Red Deer, Feb. 5.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 19-year-old man who was entitled to "a great deal of sympathy" was given a suspended sentence and one-year probationary term by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Wednesday.

Robert Christensen, 19, of 309-734 Lampson, pleaded guilty to breaking into the Bacchanalia Club, 905 Esquimalt, Dec. 19 and stealing liquor worth $48, cigarettes and $27.40 in change.

A tire iron was used to force the door.

Before sentencing, Ostler referred to Christensen's presentence report and said, "I recognize that you are entitled to a great deal of sympathy because of the difficulties with your family."

★ ★ ★

A 22-year-old man, who was sentenced to eight months in prison Dec. 5, was given a concurrent seven-month sentence for forgery.

A Victoria police detective testified that Raymond Douglas Brown forged a signature on a Government of Canada cheque April 21 and cashed it at Grants Food and Meat Market, 1022 Cook.

In return for the $132 cheque, he received cash and groceries. He was interviewed by police Jan. 8 and admitted forging the signature.

Brown was sentenced to a total of eight months in prison to be followed by an 18-month probationary term Dec. 5 on a theft charge and three narcotics charges.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the Crown was not seeking an extension of that sentence.

★ ★ ★

Robert A. Graham, 41, of 3071 Glen Lake Rd., was given a suspended sentence and six-month probationary term for possession of cannabis resin.

Prosecutor Robert Johnston told the court Graham's home was searched Dec. 23 and two grams of hashish were found on his person.

★ ★ ★

William R. Graham, 19, of 623 Belton, charged with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking, was committed for trial by judge and jury after a preliminary hearing.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Rowland Clayton, 44, of 225 Prevost, was fined a total of $500 by Judge Harold Alder for two counts of impaired driving.

Clayton was stopped at 4:50 p.m. Dec. 19 on Admirals Road. He was taken to Colwood RCMP detachment where a breathalyzer test showed a blood-alcohol reading of .17 per cent.

He was told not to drive his car for several hours and was stopped again, driving the same car, at 6:15 p.m.

William Dwight Egan, 23, of 3914 Hobbs, was fined $350 and prohibited from driving in Canada for three months between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m.

ALLENDE TO RATION LIQUOR

VALPARAISO — President Salvador Allende said today his government will ration liquor to combat drunkenness in Chile.

"Housewives will erect a monument in my honor" because of the measure, Allende told a rally in this city.

He gave no details of the alcohol rationing program.

Allende has frequently urged Chileans to cut down on their drinking. He has complained that hangover-related absences of workers have crippled production at some industries.

Lava Heats Harbor

VESTMANNAEYJAR, Iceland (UPI) — New streams of glowing lava rolled into the harbor today, raising the water temperature to 111 degrees fahrenheit.

"The sea water is so hot, it is hard to keep the engines properly cooled," the engineer of a pilot boat said as the boat made an inspection four of the Heymaey Harbor area, the third largest in Iceland and a centre for the important fishing industry.

Clouds of steam billowed over the town, making it dangerous to land at the tiny airstrip on the island.

Five houses were on fire or had burned down today, ignited by lava from the Helgafjel volcano that erupted without warning last week.

The 5,000 or so townspeople were evacuated and brought to the mainland.

Police and pilot boats patrolled the harbor today, keeping shiploads of curious tourists from the mainland away from the risk area. Landing by boat and aircraft was restricted, but telephone connections were restored again today after being partly down since last Tuesday.

A long volcanic rift opened across the 2½ mile wide island but was partly filled with lava by this afternoon. One main crater and 14 small craters are still active, spurring out fire, smoke and lava.

Only about 100 policemen, firemen and volunteers remained on the island today to protect property and personal belongings left behind.

FAREWELL KISS from wife Susan draws a smile from Vietnam-bound Capt. C. P. Dillon, 29, Third Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, who left Work Point Barracks today for Montreal. Dillon, who with 16 others locally has been on 24-hour notice for several weeks, was the first man from this area chosen for peace-keeping duties in Vietnam. After briefing in Montreal he and 152 other Canadian servicemen depart for Vietnam either Saturday or Sunday.

Investment Say For Provinces

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Provincial governments will have a major influence on what new foreign investment will be allowed in the provinces under a bill introduced in the House of Commons Wednesday.

But Ottawa doesn't intend that the provinces shall have a veto power under the legislation.

The Foreign Investment Review Act, which provides for the screening of foreign takeovers of existing businesses, and for the screening of the establishment of new businesses by foreign interests, was introduced by Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie.

The new bill is an extension of legislation which failed to get through Parliament last year. Besides extending coverage to the establishment of new businesses, the new legislation differs from last year's by providing for a Foreign Investment Review Agency, headed by a commissioner, to advise and assist the minister.

But the actual "screening" function is performed by the minister himself, as provided in last year's bill.

The new bill includes for the first time as a matter of principle the requirement that provincial industrial and economic policy shall be considered when reviewing takeovers and applications for establishment of new businesses by foreigners.

Gillespie said in an interview after first reading was given to the bill that it is "conceivable" that what is allowed in one province might not be allowed in another because of the provincial consultation requirement.

But he denied that the condition amounts to a provincial veto on the extent of new foreign investment in the provinces.

Gillespie said the government will start operating with the takeover section of the legislation, and after about a year's experience in this field, proclaim into effect that part of the bill dealing with establishment of new businesses.

He stressed that there is nothing in the bill which provides the government with a retroactive control of foreign investment in Canada, and stated that the government instead is taking "an approach that looks ahead to the future and not backward to the past."

He also recalled that the throne speech, read at the opening of Parliament Jan. 4, forecast other measures to help develop a strong Canadian-controlled business.

Legislation will be introduced later this session dealing with registration of agreements for licensing Canada and to provide that a majority of directors of all federally-incorporated companies must be Canadian.

The minister noted that the legislation avoids a "more interventionist policy" of screening the expansion of existing foreign-controlled firms in the line of business in which they are operating already.

The bill states that the expansion of foreign controlled business already in Canada will not be subject to review unless it proposes to open a business in an unrelated line of activity. A foreigner not already doing business in Canada who proposes to open a business here would be subject to screening.

There will be no "threshold" relating to the size of new businesses as there is in the case of businesse sbeing taken over by foreign interests.

Gillespie explained that this would allow, for example, Imperial Oil to increase its number of service station out-

Guerrilla Killing

SALISBURY (AP) — A middle-aged white woman was murdered and her husband wounded Wednesday night in an African nationalist attack on their tobacco farm in the remote Centenary area about 90 miles northeast here.

The farm is in an area where terrorist activity has been concentrated for the last few weeks.

Rhodesian security forces clashed with nationalist guerrillas, killing seven of them Wednesday.

Reports reaching here said police and troops were closing in on elements of the guerrilla force which has been operating in the northeastern border country for months.

U.S. DEFICIT $6.4 BILLION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States wound up 1972 with its worst trade deficit in history, $6.4 billion, more than triple the 1971 figure, the government said Wednesday.

The largest trade deficit was with Japan — more than $4 billion. The deficit was $2 billion with Canada.

The net outflow of dollars from merchandise trade with other countries is a major obstacle in bringing the nation's balance-of-payments deficit back into line, the commerce department report showed.

The deficit was the second annual in U.S. trading accounts of this century. The other, in 1971, was $2 billion. A trade deficit occurs when the value of foreign imports exceeds the value of U.S. exports to other countries.

The commerce department said that imports in 1972 totalled $55.5 billion while exports were $49.1 billion.

The United States dollar opened weak on Europe's chief money markets today, reaching a record low in Zurich, but recovering slightly in later dealings.

Dealers said the dollar's decline was due partly to the bigger-than-exected U.S. trade deficit for 1972 and to growing doubts in Washington about the ability to maintain international monetary exchange rates.

Postal Union Again Split

OTTAWA (CP) — Two postal union leaders today rejected a tentative agreement signed between the government and union negotiators Wednesday and called for a renewal of contract talks.

The proposed settlement announced by union leaders and Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet after an 18-hour bargaining session has yet to be ratified by the 28,000 members of the Council of Postal Unions.

But despite the optimistic attitude expressed by Ouellet and union co-chairman James McCall, the two national officers of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers have repudiated the agreement.

Jean-Claude Parrot, national chief steward, and Clement Morel, Quebec director, said at a news conference that members should reject the agreement in a ratification vote but refrain from giving their national leaders a strike mandate.

The dissidents said they felt they spoke for the majority of union members in disagreeing with their national negotiators.

The national officers of the union should replace their bargaining team and try for more talks, they said.

National officers are meeting here today to decide when the vote will take place.

McCall said in an interview that Parrot and Morel spoke only for themselves. They had the right to call a news conference, but the union members will decide whether the agreement is satisfactory when they vote, he said.

"A national strike now would not gain as much as we would lose," he added.

But in Belleville, Ont., thirty-three letter carriers walked off the job Wednesday to protest for the second time in a week a management proposal to speed service.

The post office remained open with 46 clerks, but mail service in Belleville and the surrounding area was stopped when delivery-truck drivers refused to cross the picket lines.

The dispute centres on a post office proposal to use taxi cabs to take members of the Letter Carriers Union to their routes.

Viet Truce Observers Powerless, Says Thieu

WE'RE NEUTRAL SAYS SHARP

Times News Services

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today the international agency being formed to investigate ceasefire violations is a "useless and helpless organization" and that South Vietnam's best guarantee of peace is a strong army.

"The ICC is a useless and helpless organization," he said.

"We have sent piles and piles of complaints after so many years but nothing has been done," Thieu told 830 South Vietnamese information officers.

"After the ceasefire we will have to protect our land, the security, the properties of the population, the institutions ...

"We must give confidence to the population, give them joy and the confidence that the government still exists and the Viet Cong have lost."

Thieu said the best guarantee that the Communists would not violate the provisions of the agreement to be signed Saturday in Paris is for South Vietnam to maintain its military strength and show political and economic unity.

The second best guarantee, Thieu said, was for the United States to react immediately if the Communists violate the agreement.

"One-man, one-vote" elections could take place in South Vietnam within six months, he added.

"We must be prepared to beat the Communists in six months in a one-man, one-vote election," Thieu said.

Under terms of the Vietnam ceasefire agreement, international supervisers will oversee elections, but it is up to the South Vietnamese and the Viet Cong to decide what offices voters will fill.

Thieu's nephew and closest personal adviser, Hoang Duc Nha, said the South Vietnamese want only the president elected, but that the Viet Cong may want village or legislative elections.

Thieu did not specify what type of election he wanted.

Earlier, Nha called for the withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops from the south, signalling the first official disagreement between north and south over the terms of the Vietnam peace treaty.

Military commanders and civilian province chiefs, Nha said, are being told to abide by the terms of the agreement and not try to capture territory now held by the Communists, but said the South Vietnamese will fight if the Communists try to take more land by force.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada told the United States today it will send a truce force to Vietnam not as a friend of the U.S., but as a "country interested in peace."

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, following an hour-long meeting with State Secretary William Rogers, said the "U.S. agrees with our position—they don't want us to be in there because we're friends with the U.S."

The minister said he was in Washington primarily for the funeral of former president Johnson but that he took the opportunity to express some of Canada's reservations about her role in the Vietnam truce supervisory commission.

Meanwhile the federal government has received invitations from each of the four combatants to take part in a ceasefire observer force in Vietnam, the external affairs department announced today.

The invitations from Washington, Hanoi, Saigon and the Viet Cong satisfy one of two conditions External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp placed on Canadian participation in the observer force for an initial 60 days.

The other condition remaining is the signing by all four combatants of the peace agreement.

That is expected to take place Saturday.

The first Canadians will leave for Vietnam this weekend to begin participation in the observer group.

In a Commons statement Wednesday, Sharp said the government will study the terms of the peace package and gain experience during the initial 60 days before deciding whether to contribute Canadian military personnel for a longer term.

Diplomatic Ploy Makes Pact Unique

PARIS (UPI) — The Vietnam ceasefire agreement to be signed in Paris Saturday may well be one of a kind, according to western diplomatic experts.

It will be signed in two separate versions with significant differences in wording.

One version, to be signed by the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong, does not identify the parties by name.

It refers merely to "the parties participating in the Paris conference on Vietnam."

If you did not know who took part in the Paris peace talks, you would not know who were the parties until you reached the signatures at the end.

North Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh was arriving today to sign for North Vietnam at Saturday's ceremonies.

U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers will sign for the United States and Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh for the Viet Cong's provincial revolutionary government. She is its foreign minister and chief negotiator in Paris. Saigon Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam already has arrived in Paris.

The second version, to be signed separately by the United States and North Vietnam, has a different preamble.

It reads "the government of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, with the agreement of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of South Vietnam, and the government of the United States of America, with the agreement of the republic of (South) Vietnam."

The two versions and the two separate signing ceremonies were part of an ingenious diplomatic ploy designed to make the agreement palatable to South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu.

According to western diplomatic sources, Thieu refused flatly to sign any document that referred to "the Provisional Revolutionary Government of South Vietnam."

This is the full name for the self-styled government set up by the Viet Cong or National Liberation Front in the Communist-controlled areas of South Vietnam.

It is recognized and supported by Hanoi. It also is recognized by most Communist governments.

But the Saigon government refuses to give it any recognition. Most western and other non-communist governments also do not recognize it.

To break the deadlock and to save the ceasefire agreement, the United States and Hanoi hit on the ingenious solution of two separate versions and two separate signing ceremonies.

Throughout the body of the treaty and its protocols there is no mention of the Provisional Revolutionary Government — only of "the parties."

Only at the very end is Madame Binh mentioned as signing "for the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam."

Even so, South Vietnam's foreign minister will not be subjected to the embarrassment of putting his signature on the same page as Madame Binh.

He and Rogers will sign on one page. Then the page will be turned and Mme. Binh and Hanoi's foreign minister will sign on a separate sheet.

SHULMAN SLAMS 'RIPOFF' BY MDs

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature, charged Wednesday that some doctors are engaged in a "massive rip-off" of the Ontario Health Insurance Plan involving millions of dollars.

Shulman told a news conference that the billings for 40 Ontario doctors indicated fraud and cheating against the plan.

He said the billings showed doctors who saw an impossible number of patients, a psychiatrist who held group sessions and billed for the patients individually, and hospital doctors who billed for work done by interns.

Shulman said one doctor was paid $18,161.41 by OHIP for April, 1972. He said that on April 17 the doctor showed he had 115 office calls, made 26 house calls and 14 hospital calls. 115 office callsm, made 26 house calls and 14 hospital calls.

Four-Province Lottery Scheme to Be Studied

British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will study the possibility of a joint lottery to finance sports, recreation and cultural activities.

Ministers and officials representing the four western provinces announced the plan Wednesday following a meeting in Victoria.

In a joint statement, the ministers said they had approved establishment of an inter-provincial steering committee consisting of two representatives from each province. B.C.'s representatives will be named by the end of this week.

(B.C. earlier this week approved a $100,000 lottery in connection with the Canada summer Games to be held in New Westminster and Burnaby in August. See also Page 7.)

The western provinces' steering committee is to complete its feasibility study by the end of February, after which the ministers will meet again at the earliest opportunity to consider the report and its recommendations.

Ernie Hall, B.C.'s provincial secretary and travel industry minister, told reporters that the meeting was held at the suggestion of Larry Desjardins, minister of tourism, recreation and cultural affairs in Manitoba.

He congratulated Desjardins on his "sparkplug work" in setting up the talks.

Also attending were Horst A. Schmid, minister of culture, youth and recreation in Alberta, and J. Clarke, director of provincial services in Saskatchewan's department of culture and youth.

Hall said he thought the chances were "good" that the lottery would be set up, but he didn't say when that might be.

Distribution of proceeds from such a lottery would be left to the individual provinces to decide, according to their respective needs and priorities, he said.

"It's quite obvious that increased leisure time demands and the higher expectations of the citizens of the country, let alone this province, mean more input in terms of dollars and this (the lottery proposal) is as good a way as any to deal with that particular problem."

Hall stressed the funding was intended purely for sports, recreational and cultural programs.

"We're not talking about that old bugaboo of hospitals and acute care beds," he said.

FOREIGN INVESTMENT

lets in Canada without being subject to screening, but not to enter the field of electronics without government approval.

Acquisitions by Canadian investers, as provided in last year's bill, would not be subject to review, so that the process would not affect takeovers by Canadian citizens ordinarily resident in Canada, by landed immigrants who have lived in this country six years or less, or by firms which they control.

The legislation provides a "threshold" below which foreign takeovers would not be reviewed. The screening process only would apply to firms which have gross assets of $250,000 or more, or annual gross revenues of $3 million or more.

Once the section of the bill relating to the screening of new businesses is proclaimed, the threshold on foreign takeovers will be removed for all except existing foreign-controlled businesses operating in Canada proposing to acquire a related business.

This, the minister explained, is to avoid "indirect circumvention" of the legislation by foreign interests through the acquisition of a small existing business.

The review process would apply to the acquisition by a foreign investor of a business in Canada which already is foreign controlled.

The bill, as did the previous legislation, stresses that takeovers or establishment of new business by foreigners may be allowed by the government if Ottawa is satisfied that this would result in "significant benefit" to Canada.

The five factors to be considered by the government in deciding whether to approve foreign takeovers or applications by foreigners for establishment of new businesses are:

The effect of the proposed investment on the level and nature of economic activity in Canada including employment;

The degree and significance of participation by Canadians in the business enterprise and in any industry or industries in Canada of which it forms a part;

The effect of the proposed investment on productivity, industrial efficiency, technological development, product innovation and variety in Canada;

The effect of the proposed investment on competition within any industry or industries in this country;

And the compatibility of the proposed investment with national and provincial objectives for industrial and economic policy.

The bill provides for a right of appeal before the courts of any decision by the government, except on the question of "significant benefit" which Gillespie said is a policy decision rather than a matter of legal interpretation.

Such appeals might relate to the minister's judgment as to whether the company is foreign controlled, whether the investor has acquired control, whether it is a Canadian business which has been acquired, and, in the case of a new business, whether it is related to an existing operation.

The procedure covered by the legislation requires the foreign investor to notify the agency of the proposed investment, and to provide information, to be specified later by regulation, to help the government assess the effect of the propcsed investment.

. . . VIETNAM

"We are not going to expand and make forays into areas that are under control of the other side," he said. "If the other side tries to expand its area, of coursse we are going to stop them by force. "We have no illusions that the Communists are going to abide strictly by their promises," he said. "We still have to watch."

Meanwhile, U.S. planes striking throughout South Vietnam and the heaviest Communist shelling in nearly a month spelled no let-up on either side today.

Neither U.S. nor South Vietnamese officials made any secret of their intent to keep fighting until the ceasefire takes effect.

"Until then we'll do anything we want to," said a South Vietnamese official.

"There has been no change in mission," said a ranking U.S. officer.

A Communist coast artillery shell hit the U.S. guided missile frigate Preble off northernmost South Vietnam Wednesday causing damage but no injuries, the U.S. command said today.

The command said shrapnel from four additional shells also sprayed the Preble. Three electronic antennas and one torpedo tube were damaged.

The Preble was on a naval gunship mission in support of South Vietnamese troops ashore, a spokesman said. It remained on duty.

The United States, however, has stopped troop shipments to Vietnam, ordered the clearing of North Vietnam's mined harbors (See also Page 28) and prepare to aid American prisoners of war.

The Pentagon has cancelled all military orders for assignments to Vietnam "effective immediately."

However there has been no restriction placed on the estimated 84,000 U.S. servicemen stationed at bases in Thailand and on offshore vessels of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

The White House indicated they would be withdrawn as the need for them diminishes, but dismissed the possibility of a re-introduction of U.S. troops in South Vietnam as a "hypothetical situation we don't expect to arise."

U.S. Body Favors Drug Law Easing

NEW YORK (AP) — Legalization of marijuana in the United States still seems a remote prospect. But growing numbers believe its possession for personal use should not be considered a crime.

After considering more than 50 reports on the drug, the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse concluded that personal use ought not to be treated as a criminal offence.

"Nobody on the commission felt the drug was harmless," said Dr. Henry Brill, one of its members and a New York hospital director. "But when we addressed ourselves to the legal situation we had to conclude that the present very severe laws were not warranted."

U.S. federal law makes possession of marijuana for personal use a misdemeanor on the first offence, punishable by up to a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

In Texas and Rhode Island, marijuana possession is a felony that may mean a life sentence. However, forthcoming legislative sessions in those states are scheduled to consider reforms of the law.

TO OFFER BILL

On the national front, Senator Jacob Javits (Rep. N.Y.) and Senator Harold Hughes (Dem. Iowa) plan to reintroduce a bill in the Senate this year which would make personal possession and use of marijuana no longer a crime. Possession of the drug in public would be allowed for amounts of less than three ounces.

The bill was first proposed last year. Its passage would not immediately affect state laws, but the senators feel it might encourage the states to follow suit.

California, Nevada, Arizona and Mississippi already give judges the option of considering marijuana possession either a felony or a misdemeanor.

The national commission found that marijuana had been tried at least once by 24 million Americans; a Gallup poll taken in 1971 showed that 51 per cent of all college students have smoked it.

The commission also learned that public attitudes toward the drug were confused, and sometimes based on misconceptions.

About half the adult population over 18 believe that "some people have died from using marijuana," the commission found. About 80 per cent also wrongly believe it is addictive, while 44 per cent think it is more dangerous than heroin.

Supporters of marijuana law reform argue that present laws are doing more harm than the drug itself. The American Medical Association, the National Institute of Mental Health, the American Bar Association and even Senator Barry Goldwater (Rep. Ariz) have called for a reduction of penalties for possession and use.

EFFECTS NOT CLEAR

Is the drug dangerous? Opinions vary.

Dr. Lester Greenspoon of Harvard Medical School says that "according to many studies, marijuana is less dangerous than many other drugs, including alcohol and tobacco."

Dr. Harold Kolansky, associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania, says he has found evidence of irreversible brain damage, psychoses, suicidal tendencies and personality splits in 50 patients who smoked marijuana steadily for one to three years.

Whatever the verdict, the future legal status of the drug probably depends less on scientific findings than on the general consensus among the public.

Permissiveness Blamed for Riot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A special House of Representatives subcommittee created to investigate racial violence on two United States aircraft carriers has concluded that permissiveness "exists in the navy today."

Chairman Floyd V. Hicks (Dem.—Wash.) said Tuesday his special House armed services subcommittee could pinpoint no racial discrimination aboard either the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk or Constellation.

Some sailors thought there was discrimination, "but certainly nothing of a nature to justify a belief that violent reaction was required," Hicks said.

"The riot on Kitty Hawk," he said, "consisted of unprovoked assaults by a very few men, most of whom were of below-average mental capacity, most of whom had been aboard for less than one year and all of whom were black.

. . . PEACE FORCE

The 60-day period coincides with the period provided in the peace package for withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam and release of prisoners of war.

The protocol dealing with supervision of the ceasefire calls for 290 men from each of the four prospective countries on the observer group — Canada, Hungary, Poland and Indonesia.

He also told former prime minister John Diefenbaker the government was concerned that Canada as one of four observer countries would be required to pay two per cent of the cost of keeping its men in Vietnam over and above regular pay.

Canada had proposed that the four combatant groups — the U.S., North and South Vietnam and the Viet Cong — pay all costs beyond normal pay for the troops.

This would include such things as housing, food, travel and other similar operational expenses.

He said he would like to see the United Nations security council involved as the continuing political authority for the observer team.

Meanwhile, some opposition dissatisfaction was sounded Wednesday about sending troops to Vietnam before a Commons debate on the peace supervisory role there.

But there is no indication that any party intends to vote against dispatching troops.

Sharp said Wednesday that a debate probably will be held next week on a government resolution to dispatch troops.

The first planeload will leave St. Hubert, Que., near Montreal Sunday. About 120 of a total force of 288 men are scheduled to depart then.

NDP leader David Lewis said, also outside the Commons, that he does not think the government is being hasty in committing men to Southeast Asia.

Salvagers Ordered To Haul Away Logs

'If this keeps up, the Spit will look like one huge gravel pit'

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The B.C. lands department has ordered salvage companies to remove all logs beached on publicly-owned Whiffin Spit at Sooke.

"We have been assured that the area will be cleaned up and no damage will be done to the vegetation on the unspoilt section of the spit," a government spokesman said today.

The order follows complaints from residents that front-end loaders hauled stray logs from the sea on to a section of the spit containing the last bit of vegetation.

"Some damage was done," Howard Elder, Capital Regional Board director for Sooke, said. "The machines chewed up some vegetation growing on a thin layer of soil. If this keeps up the spit will look like one huge gravel pit."

Howard Elder, Capital Regional Board director for Sooke, said:

"Some damage was done. The machines chewed up some vegetation growing on a thin layer of soil. If this keeps up the spit will look like one huge gravel pit."

Elder said the logs which broke away from a boom could easily have been floated a hundred yards to the west and beached on a part of the spit already damaged by logging operations.

He said the logs should be hauled back into the sea by cable and taken to another area to prevent further damage.

"If this had been private property, the operators would have asked the owner for permission to trespass," he noted.

The latest encroachment on the spit has revived demands that the spit be dedicated as a park. It is the only public waterfront property in the Sooke and Saseenos communities.

The scenic mile-long tongue of land dividing Sooke harbor from the Strait of Juan de Fuca was reserved several years ago as parkland by the lands department. This was done at the request of the B.C. parks branch which eventually plans to turn over the spit to the Capital regional District for inclusion in its regional park system.

However, despite the park reserve, industry has steadily encroached on the spit. First, foreshore leases were granted to two small contractors for booming.

Then in 1971, the department granted Island tug and Barge a lease half-way down the spit for mooring chip barges and for log storage. This was opposed by the Capital Regional District on the grounds that spillage from the barges would pollute another section of the harbor and spoil the beaches.

A roadway constructed on the spit has destroyed all vegetation along half of the land area.

Charles I. Rushton, Tideview Road, says it will take 50 years for the vegetation to grow back on the west section of the spit.

"Now they are moving into another area," he said. "We are slowly destroying the spit. It is time some regulations were instututed to prevent further damage."

Deputy lands minister David Borthwick said he is surprised the Capital Regional District has not yet applied for the property.

"I don't think there would be any difficulty in turning over the area to the region," he said.

60-year-old tree falls victim to garbage truck

CHERRY BLOSSOM TIME ENDS FOR OLD-TIMER

Rockland's biggest and oldest double-blooming Japanese cherry tree met an untimely end this moring at the hands of a garbage truck driver.

The 60-year-old tree stood at the corner of Rockland and Linden, gazing leaflessly into space at 7:50 this morning.

Suddenly, a 24,000-pound City of Victoria garbage department packer truck came out of the west along Rockland Ave. The driver, new to the route, didn't allow for the tree's overhanging branches as he skidded on ice at Linden.

The truck's box caught the tree out on a limb and cherry blossom time was over forever.

Nearby, apartment owner Lawrence Jones, 1171 Rockland, heard the tree's last agonized cry.

"It wakened me up," he said.

As he spoke, the chain saws were already disposing of the lifeless limbs of Rockland's first auto accident victim of 1973.

Talk, and Keep Talking, Trustees, Strikers Urged

By LINDA HUGHES

Greater Victoria teachers have called for "immediate and non-stop negotiations" to bring an end to the 13-day strike by school board maintenance workers.

"The teachers feel there's been no serious attempt to bring a quick end to this thing," Greater Victoria Teachers' Association president Bob Mitchell said today.

At a GVTA general meeting Wednesday night, Mitchell said more than 150 teachers agreed that "most undesirable learning conditions exist in classrooms, despite what (school board chairman) Peter Bunn has said."

They passed a motion instructing the GVTA executive "to urge both sides in the dispute to sit down immediately in non-stop negotiations until an agreement is reached."

"The executive was also instructed to consider with lawyers the matter of temperatures in the schools," Mitchell said.

The president said the motions came in response to Bunn's "repeated comments that everything is fine."

"I don't think the board has been in every school," Mitchell said.

"I visited every school last week and they're cold and dirty."

"We definitely feel there's been an interruption in the education of a good number of young people who can't work at home or without the help of teachers."

Hampered by Cold, Untidiness

Mitchell said the association had received a number of specific complaints from teachers in cases where classrooms were freezing in 40 and 50 degree temperatures and untidy conditions were preventing proper instruction.

He said he had heard of principals telling the school board that immediate cleaning was required if learning was to continue.

"The teachers are in the middle just like the students," Mitchell added.

"We want the trustees to take a more active role," he said, "a more personal interest in what's going on."

Bunn said today he felt the teachers were being "childish" and taking an "incredibly negative position."

He said negotiations will begin on Saturady because mediator Clark Gilmour was not available until then.

"How do they (the teachers) know we've made no serious attempt to negotiate," Bunn said.

"We've had over 50 hours of negotiations since October."

Bunn said he disagreed that the trustees should take a more active role in negotiations.

"That's a professional job," he said, "there's no place for amateurs anymore when you're dealing with multi-millions of dollars."

Union spokesman Dick Proctor said CUPE is "prepared to sit there as long as necessary and bargain in good faith to reach agreement.

"We applaud the teachers and hope the school board management will listen too and bargain seriously."

Mitchell said he realized the teachers could take no action and their motions "were just to urge the two sides to sit down and end this strike."

City Joins Critics Of School Strikers

Without a word of discussion, Victoria city council today unanimously deplored the current strike of non-teaching staff in Greater Victoria schools.

The aldermen's eight hands shot up in approval of a resolution submitted by the mayors of Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Saanich and Victoria which deplored the strikers' "manipulation of third parties" and excessive pay demands.

Today's vote leaves councils of the four core municipalities split on the resolution.

On Monday, councils in Esquimalt and Saanich turned it down while Oak Bay council voted unanimously in favor of it.

At Esquimalt, the resolution was turned down by a 4-2 vote of aldermen who did not allow debate on it.

In Saanich, the subject produced the closest vote but was defeated 4-3.

Ald. Alan Newberry, an administrator in the Sooke School District, argued that while the strike is a "barbaric device," it was not grounds for interference at the political level.

COMPANIES ACCUSED OF DUMPING

Two Lake Cowichan firms were charged in Duncan provincial court this morning with polluting Cowichan Lake.

Island Shake and Shingle Mill and Crown Zellerbach Ltd. have been charged with dumping debris into the lake. Both companies were remanded without plea until 9:30 a.m., Feb. 8.

The charges were laid by the federal department of fisheries in Duncan.

TREMOR PRODS SLEEPY HEADS

Some local residents got an extra gentle shake from bed this morning.

A "very small" earth tremor was recorded at 7:31 a.m. and Dr. William Milne, seismologist with the federal department of energy, mines and resources, said he thinks it was centred about three or four miles southeast of Oak Bay.

The tremor lasted about five seconds, he said, and recorded about 2½ on the Richter scale.

Ruling Delayed On Bay Village

Victoria city council today delayed a decision on the controversial Bay Village shopping centre proposal, shifting the issue into a secret meeting at the end of formal proceedings.

City solicitor T. P. O'Grady said a Jan. 12 letter from the Bay Village developers, which was to form the basis for the city signing a land-use contract and deed of variation, had since been "qualified" by the developers.

Ald. Mike Young, who signed the motion for the city to approve the long-disputed project, said the matter should be referred to a secret meeting "in the light of correspondence that has taken place in the last 48 hours."

James Bay Community Association announced Wednesday it had requested a provincial department of municipal affairs investigation of the shopping centre development and Victoria's handling of the matter.

Developer J. A. Mace seeks to construct a 29, possibly 24-storey tower and supermaket complex at the southwest corner of Simcoe and Menzies.

Earlier, council had approved in principle the rezoning of a site at the northwest corner of Simcoe and Menzies, directly across the street from the proposed Bay Village shopping centre.

Council agreed to draw up a bylaw amendment applied for by Yennadon Holdings Ltd., which would change the corner now occupied by aging corner stores from "high-density multiple dwelling" zone to "limited commercial" zone.

The new zoning would allow another shopping centre to be constructed at the sight.

Lone voice opposing the move was Ald. Percy Frampton, who criticized the Advisory Planning Commission for recommending the rezoning in the light of a recently published James Bay land use study drawn up by the city administration.

Frampton said he thought the study was "still in limbo" and should not be used as the basis for recommendation by the commission.

He also questioned the commission's recommendation that "guarantees" be worked out between the city and Yennadon to ensure completion of a secondary phase of the proposed development within two years.

Recommendation of the Yennadon proposal was made by the Advisory Planning Commission once before on April 19, 1971.

Turn Down the Heat, Grab a Sweater

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The average Victorian will pay $202.40 to heat his house with oil this year, compared with $186.40 in 1972.

And the U.S. National Petroleum Council estimates the same amount of oil in 1985 could cost almost $500.

The $202.40 figure is based upon consumption of 800 gallons per year, which is the Victoria average, according to Bill Kissinger of Imperial Kissinger Oil Distributors.

★ ★ ★

Other sources indicated that large homes would cost about $300 to heat, based upon consumption of 1,200 gallons per year.

Kissinger said he felt the recent price increase to 25.3 cents per gallon, from 23.3 cents on Jan. 10 justified in view of the fact oil prices had only gone from 18 to 25.3 cents in the past 19 years.

This is a 40 per cent increase, less than the rate of increase of wages.

There has been no decrease in the amount of oil purchased, despite the higher price.

"People still like to be comfortable."

But he is not looking forward to the massive price increases which the National Petroleum Council foresees for North America.

He said it was not at all an attractive prospect.

The National Petroleum Council is an oil industry association that provides background statistics for the U.S. government.

The council says oil prices will increase about 125 per cent in the next 12 years, as the supply diminishes in that country.

Costs of locating and transporting oil are growing rapidly and the oil has to be brought from further away, from the Arctic or North Sea instead of from Texas and California.

A 125 per cent increase in the heating oil bill would put oil at about 60 cents per gallon or $480 for the average Victoria household per year.

At that price, many Victorians might start turning down their thermostats and putting on a sweater.

While the U.S. prices will soar in response to a shortage, the Canadian prices will be pulled up at the same time despite a surplus of oil in this country.

An oil company spokesman said oil prices are determined on a world-wide basis because of the free market (no tariff) policy of major countries.

★ ★ ★

Therefore huge price increases in the U.S. would spill over into Canada regardless of the supply in this country, unless the federal government took some action forcing a two-price policy and tariff barriers.

Industry observers expect the free market system to continue — and prices to soar in Canada as well as the U.S.

A major unanswered question is whether consumers will reject the increases and sharply reduce oil consumption.

Some oil industry spokesmen hope it will, because the demand is growing faster than some companies can increase their supply.

Carrying through on one of his main campaign promises, Premier Dave Barrett today established government-run automobile insurance as his government's top legislative priority in the speech from the throne.

The speech, read by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson to a jam-packed legislature, was an exercise in extreme brevity in comparison to speeches under the former Social Credit administration.

But at a press conference earlier in the day Barrett said the insurance plan, along with extensive reforms to the rules of the house, is his government's main concern heading into the second session of B.C.'s 30th Parliament.

Another priority item listed by Barrett is creation of 1,000 new jobs in the civil service, which he said are necessary because of arbitrary cutbacks by the former government.

Barrett said the province can also expect legislation in the following areas:

—A B.C. bill of rights.

—Improvements to pension plans administered by the province.

—Expansion of the 14-man cabinet in amendments to the Constitution Act, including establishment of a department of the environment.

—Amendments to the Park Act, Litter Act, Land Act and University Endowment Lands Act.

—An ambulance services act and amendments to the Medical Act and Mental Health Act.

—Establishment of an industrial development corporation to encourage secondary industry in the province.

Barrett's two-page speech took only minutes for Nicholson to read. But included in the short message was the bad news provincial insurance companis have been waiting since last fall's election to hear.

The government-run car insurance plan will be introduced in the house as one of the first items, Barrett said. He added that the legislation will not be going to a house committee for study before passage. Details of the plan will not be known until the bill is introduced on the floor of the house.

This plan of action, Barrett said, is being extended to all the other legislation referred to in the throne speech. He was willing to release only sketchy details on ghe government's plans, saying he will release fiscal information on the day the budget speech is delivered in the house — expected to be Feb. 9.

Barrett said he was "amused" at the $100,000 advertising campaign instituted by B.C. insurance companies against the government's plan to estabish its own car insurance scheme.

"We are going to have government-owned automobile insurance in this province and if the industry wants to continute to spend money on advertising, I say they are welcome because the money they spend employs printers, advertising people and is a boost to the economy," the premier said.

"If the New Yorkers, the Montrealers and the Torontonians want to spend that money from their high-brow offices back east, ship it out. The ads are good reading."

Barrett said the target date for availability of the government car insurance will be contained in the bill when it is introduced.

In explaining the government's intention to establish 1,000 new jobs in the civil service, Barrett said the government "will bolster services to our people, industry and labor, to catch up with modern society's demands for

Lava Heats Harbor

VESTMANNAEYJAR, Iceland (UPI) — New streams of glowing lava rolled into the harbor today, raising the water temperature to 111 degrees fahrenheit.

"The sea water is so hot, it is hard to keep the engines properly cooled," the engineer of a pilot boat said as the boat made an inspection tour of the Heymaey Harbor area, the third largest in Iceland and a centre for the important fishing industry.

Clouds of steam billowed over the town, making it dangerous to land at the tiny airstrip on the island.

Five houses were on fire or had burned down today, ignited by lava from the Helgafjel volcano that erupted without warning last week.

The 5,000 or so townspeople were evacuated and brought to the mainland.

Police and pilot boats patrolled the harbor today, keeping shiploads of curious tourists from the mainland away from the risk area. Landing by boat and aircraft was restricted, but telephone connections were restored again today after being partly down since last Tuesday.

A long volcanic rift opened across the 2½ mile wide island but was partly filled with lava by this afternoon. One main crater and 14 small craters are still active, spurring out fire, smoke and lava.

Only about 100 policemen, firemen and volunteers remained on the island today to protect property and personal belongings left behind.

FAREWELL KISS from wife Susan draws a smile from Vietnam-bound Capt. C. P. Dillon, 29, Third Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, who left Work Point Barracks today for Montreal. Dillon, who with 16 others locally has been on 24-hour notice for several weeks, was the first man from this area chosen for peace-keeping duties in Vietnam. After briefing in Montreal he and 152 other Canadian servicemen depart for Vietnam either Saturday or Sunday.

Provinces to Get Say On Foreign Cash

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Provincial governments will have a major influence on what new foreign investment will be allowed in the provinces under a bill introduced in the House of Commons Wednesday.

But Ottawa doesn't intend that the provinces shall have a veto power under the legislation.

The Foreign Investment Review Act, which provides for the screening of foreign takeovers of existing businesses, and for the screening of the establishment of new businesses by foreign interests, was introduced by Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie.

The new bill is an extension of legislation which failed to get through Parliament last year. Besides extending coverage to the establishment of new businesses, the new legislation differs from last year's by providing for a Foreign Investment Review Agency, headed by a commissioner, to advise and assist the minister.

But the actual "screening" function is performed by the minister himself, as provided in last year's bill.

The new bill includes for the first time as a matter of principle the requirement that provincial industrial and economic policy shall be considered when reviewing takeovers and applications for establishment of new businesses by foreigners.

Gillespie said in an interview after first reading was given to the bill that it is "conceivable" that what is allowed in one province might not be allowed in another because of the provincial consultation requirement.

But he denied that the condition amounts to a provincial veto on the extent of new foreign investment in the provinces.

Gillespie said the government will start operating with the takeover section of the legislation, and after about a year's experience in this field, proclaim into effect that part of the bill dealing with establishment of new businesses.

He stressed that there is nothing in the bill which provides the government with a retroactive control of foreign investment in Canada, and stated that the government instead is taking "an approach that looks ahead to the future and not backward to the past."

He also recalled that the throne speech, read at the opening of Parliament Jan. 4, forecast other measures to help develop a strong Canadian-controlled business.

Legislation will be introduced later this session dealing with registration of agreements for licensing Canada and to provide that a majority of directors of all federally-incorporated companies must be Canadian.

The minister noted that the legislation avoids a "more interventionist policy" of screening the expansion of existing foreign-controlled firms in the line of business in which they are operating already.

The bill states that the expansion of foreign controlled business already in Canada will not be subject to review unless it proposes to open a business in an unrelated line of activity. A foreigner not already doing business in Canada who proposes to open a business here would be subject to screening.

There will be no "threshold" relating to the size of new businesses as there is in the case of businesses being taken over by foreign interests.

Gillespie explained that this would allow, for example, Imperial Oil to increase its number of service station out-

A detailed proposal for creating two downtown pedestrian shopping malls on Government and View streets will come before city council public works committee Tuesday.

Ald. Sam Bawlf presented to planning chairmen Wednesday a plan for clearing motor traffic from Government between Humboldt and Johnson and from View between Government and half a block beyond Douglas.

Bawlf thinks businessmen and property owners can be persuaded to accept the scheme by fall and it could be in operation by spring 1974.

OIL SPILL FOULS ALERT BAY BEACH

A layer of marine bunker oil half a mile long, 10 feet wide and two inches thick has drifted ashore on a beach near Alert Bay after an Irish merchant ship ran aground on Haddington Reef early today.

The bulk cargo vessel Irish Stardust floated free and is en route to its next port of call, Victoria, where damage will be surveyed.

An aircraft carrying six representatives of the environmental protection service was sent at noon to the accident area after receiving reports from an armed forces Argus patrol plane this morning.

Also en route is a vessel from Clean Seas Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Georgia Strait Towing, dispatched by the ship's agent Anglo Canadian Shipping Ltd. to clean up the oil spill.

Orders to clean up were given by the ministry of transport, said Chris Hatfield, Vancouver, regional co-ordinator of the department of environmental protection.

Hatfield said it was not known how much oil had escaped from the ship's fuel bunkers, but it would be carrying about 450 tons. The accident occurred about 1 a.m.

He said the Argus reported several slicks in the wake of the ship.

Postal Union Again Split

OTTAWA (CP) — Two postal union leaders today rejected a tentative agreement signed between the government and union negotiators Wednesday and called for a renewal of contract talks.

The proposed settlement announced by union leaders and Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet after an 18-hour bargaining session has yet to be ratified by the 28,000 members of the Council of Postal Unions.

But despite the optimistic attitude expressed by Ouellet and union co-chairman James McCall, the two national officers of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers have repudiated the agreement.

Jean-Claude Parrot, national chief steward, and Clement Morel, Quebec director, said at a news conference that members should reject the agreement in a ratification vote but refrain from giving their national leaders a strike mandate.

The dissidents said they felt they spoke for the majority of union members in disagreeing with their national negotiators.

The national officers of the union should replace their bargaining team and try for more talks, they said.

National officers are meeting here today to decide when the vote will take place.

McCall said in an interview that Parrot and Morel spoke only for themselves. They had the right to call a news conference, but the union members will decide whether the agreement is satisfactory when they vote, he said.

"A national strike now would not gain as much as we would lose," he added.

But in Belleville, Ont., thirty-three letter carriers walked off the job Wednesday to protest for the second time in a week a management proposal to speed service.

The post office remained open with 46 clerks, but mail service in Belleville, and the surrounding area was stopped when delivery-truck drivers refused to cross the picket lines.

The dispute centres on a post office proposal to use taxi cabs to take members of the Letter Carriers Union to their routes.

Viet Truce Observers Powerless, Says Thieu

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today the international agency being formed to investigate ceasefire violations is a "useless and helpless organization" and that South Vietnam's best guarantee of peace is a strong army.

"The ICC is a useless and helpless organization," he said.

"We have sent piles and piles of complaints after so many years but nothing has been done," Thieu told 830 South Vietnamese information officers.

"After the ceasefire we will have to protect our land, the security, the properties of the population, the institutions

"We must give confidence to the population, give them joy and the confidence that the government still exists and the Viet Cong have lost."

Thieu said the best guarantee that the Communists would not violate the provisions of the agreement to be signed Saturday in Paris is for South Vietnam to maintain its military strength and show political and economic unity.

The second best guarantee, Thieu said, was for the United States to react immediately if the Communists violate the agreement.

"One-man, one-vote" elections could take place in South Vietnam within six months, he added.

"We must be prepared to beat the Communists in six months in a one-man, one-vote election," Thieu said.

Under terms of the Vietnam ceasefire agreement, international supervisors will oversee elections, but it is up to the South Vietnamese and the Viet Cong to decide what offices voters will fill.

Thieu's nephew and closest personal adviser, Hoang Duc Nha, said the South Vietnamese want only the president elected, but that the Viet Cong may want village or legislative elections.

Thieu did not specify what type of election he wanted.

Earlier, Nha called for the withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops from the south, signalling the first official disagreement between north and south over the terms of the Vietnam peace treaty.

Military commanders and civilian province chiefs, Nha said, are being told to abide by the terms of the agreement and not try to capture territory now held by the Communists, but said the South Vietnamese will fight if the Communists try to take more land by force.

WE'RE NEUTRAL SAYS SHARP

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada told the United States today it will send a truce force to Vietnam not as a friend of the U.S., but as a "country interested in peace."

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, following an hour-long meeting with State Secretary William Rogers, said the "U.S. agrees with our position they don't want us to be in there because we're friends with the U.S."

The minister said he was in Washington primarily for the funeral of former president Johnson but that he took the opportunity to express some of Canada's reservations about her role in the Vietnam truce supervisory commission.

Meanwhile, the federal government has received invitations from each of the four combatants to take part in a ceasefire observer force in Vietnam, the external affairs department announced today.

The invitations from Washington, Hanoi, Saigon and the Viet Cong satisfy one of two conditions External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp placed on Canadian participation in the observer force for an initial 60 days.

The other condition remaining is the signing by all four combatants of the peace agreement.

That is expected to take place Saturday.

The first Canadians will leave for Vietnam this weekend to begin participation in the observer group.

In a Commons statement Wednesday, Sharp said the government will study the terms of the peace package and gain experience during the initial 60 days before deciding whether to contribute Canadian military personnel for a longer term.
